GERMAN RADIO DINS MESSAGE INTO BRITONS

GET RID OF "RULING CLIQUE"; SPEAKERS REPEAT

(By The Associated Press)

Berlin, July 20—Germany unleashed a thunder of words today in an attempt to sway the English people, over the head of Winston Churchill, and get them to end the war.

The alternative, Nazi Germany says, is destruction.

Radio transmitters dinned Adolf Hitler's "last appeal to reason" into English ears until, as authorized sources put it, every Englishman knows exactly what is in store for him unless he gets rid of "the plutocratic ruling clique" which wants to keep on fighting.

Repeatedly the English were told that Hitler has no desire to harm either England or her empire. It was suggested that only by getting out from under Churchill's control can England escape the German onslaught.

No Further Proposal

There was, moreover, not the slightest hint either in Hitler's speech or in the words of radio or press that Germany is slowing up one iota in her preparation for this attack. It is assumed that the whole military and naval machane is ready to go at any time at the fuehrer's word.

No further direct proposal to England may be expected from Hitler, the authoritative Dienst Aus Deutschland said.

"The initiative must now come from England," said this commentary. "Hitler has not set a time limit for the answer from England, but from that fact it cannot be concluded that England is able to claim an unlimited period to answer the peace offer."

The British press view that Hitler's reichstag speech of yesterday was "not worth answering" was rejected in Berlin as not the true voice of the British people.

With the German radio broadcasting English translations of the Hitler speech over and over again, the high command made it plain there is a much grimmer side to this "realization" campaign directed at England.

Next Step Hitler's

Today's communique detailed widespread air raids on shipping, harbors, power plants, warehouses and military positions from south England to Scotland; claimed the sinking of a 5,000-ton merchant ship and damage to three other merchantmen and a destroyer, and reported the sinking of 24,700 tons of merchant shipping by a single U-boat.

It took cognizance of new British air raids which "injured several civilians" in northern and western Germany last night.

The next few days will show, authorized persons asserted, how the British reaction to the Hitler speech, as pounded home by the radio campaign, is to be evaluated.

When the next step will come and of what it will consist, they

Ready to Leave

John Nance Garner

It appeared in Washington yesterday that Vice President Garner might be disgusted with the Democratic party and especially with third term ideas, which he strongly opposed. He was reported ready to head for home and let some one else worry about the campaign.

WILLKIE BACKED IN LOUISIANA

Two Old-Line Democrats Change Because of Sec'y Wallace

New York, July 20 (AP)—The split among Louisiana Democrats over Secretary Wallace's nomination for vice president widened into direct action tonight with the announcement of David W. Pipes, Jr, that he was a Republican candidate for congress.

Pipes, a life-long Democrat and nationally known sugar planter of Houma, was the second to announce withdrawal from the state's anciently solid Democratic ranks within 24 hours.

Charles A. Farwell, spokesman for the American Sugar Cane League, last night pinned on a "Willkie for President" button, and said "the Republicans are Louisiana's only hope."

Pipes, in announcing his candidacy, said "I haven't deserted the Democratic party. The Democratic party has deserted us in the selection of Wallace, worst enemy we ever had."

Both Pipes and Farwell charged Wallace's restriction quotas and plough-up campaigns have retarded progress of the state's sugar industry in favor of foreign crops.

Louisiana's delegation to the national Democratic convention in Chicago cast its 20 votes for Speaker Bankhead for vice president.

"ALFALFA" BILL, TOO

Oklahoma City, July 20. (AP)—William H. "Alfalfa" Murray, who sought the Democratic nomination for president in 1932, pledged his support to Wendell Willkie today in a telegram to the Republican nominee.

The former Oklahoma governor who stirred up a rumpus in 1936 by introducing Alf M. Landon when the Republican standard bearer came here for a campaign speech, wired Willkie:

"I pledge you my support for president and for a congress to assist you, for I will not vote for any man for a third term."

Military Training Sought In Mexico

Mexico City, July 20 (AP)—President Lazaro Cardenas sent to congress today a bill to establish universal compulsory military training in Mexico. Its passage was considered assured.

The bill to make all physicaly fit Mexicans between 18 and 45 eligible for service, will be considered by the extraordinary session of congress convening next Thursday.

Mexico now has an active army of 52,000 men. The war minister said several weeks ago it expected to call 50,000 men a year for training at least until an active reserve of 200,000 had been developed.

French Indo-China Government Change May Help Japanese

Hanoi, French Indo-China, July 20. (AP) — French Indo-China changed governors today in a move which may speed Japan's growing influence in southern Asia.

Admiral Jean Decoux, named by the totalitarian government of Marshal Philippe Petain, took over administration of this French colony from Gen. George Catroux.

The new administration is generally expected to facilitate far-reaching economic dealing with the Japanese government.

BRITISH WAR ORDERS HELP IN MICHIGAN

$25,000,000 BUSINESS AID ANTICIPATED IN DETROIT

Detroit, July 20. (AP)—Michigan and Detroit industry will receive a "transfusion" of more than $25,000,000 for British war orders and contracts to bolster national defense in the United States.

Still being negotiated is a contract for 9,000 Rolls-Royce airplane engines by Packard Motor Car Co.

This contract alone would provide for $30,000,000 in plant expansion and the hiring of 14,000 additional men. Under its terms, 6,000 engines would go to Great Britain and 3,000 to the United States.

JOBS FOR 2,500,000

Washington, July 20. (AP)—The CIO estimated today that 2,500,000 unemployed would find jobs in the next 12 months as a result of the rearmament program.

Actual defense expenditures in this period, the organization's economic outlook said, are expected to be $6,400,000,000. Estimating the number of unemployed at 10,748,000, it said an annual arms expenditure of fifteen to twenty billions would be required to employ all of them.

Meanwhile, this week both the Briggs Manufacturing Co. and Murray Corp. of America announced their entries into the airplane parts industry. Briggs expects to start work soon on metal wing assemblies for U. S. observation planes, under a contract signed with Vought-Sikorsky division of United Aircraft Corp.

British Order Engines

Size of the order was not disclosed, but it will call for the use of an idle plant. Production is expected to start early in October.

Murray Corp. has organized an aircraft division to handle defense orders and plans to turn over one wing of its Detroit plant for aircraft assembly work.

A $750,000 order for engines by the British purchasing commission has been received by Warner Aircraft Corp., calling for seven-cyllinder air-cooled engines for training planes built by the British in Australia.

Within the last few weeks the war department has awarded numerous contracts to Michigan firms.

Plans of Aviation Corp., a New York holding company for aircraft enterprises, include the operation of the Republic Aircraft Products Corp., of Detroit, which makes motor and airplane parts. The holding company has contracted for purchase of the Detroit corporation.

Thugs Get $5,000 Cash And Bonds In Marine City Entry

Marine City, Mich., July 20 (AP)—Thugs, who apparently escaped in a speedboat in the St. Clair river early today, cracked the safe of the C. A. Westrick & Son Builders Supply company and took between $4,000 and $5,000 in cash, $9,350 in U. S. government baby bonds and several shares of stock.

Trooper Nels G. Friberg, formerly of Manistique, said discovery of pieces of paper and a share of stock, part of the loot, along the bank of the river led officers to believe the robbers left the scene by boat. The rear of the building borders the river, and persons entering it would be unnoticed from the street, he said.

Detroit Strike Now A Case For Lawyers

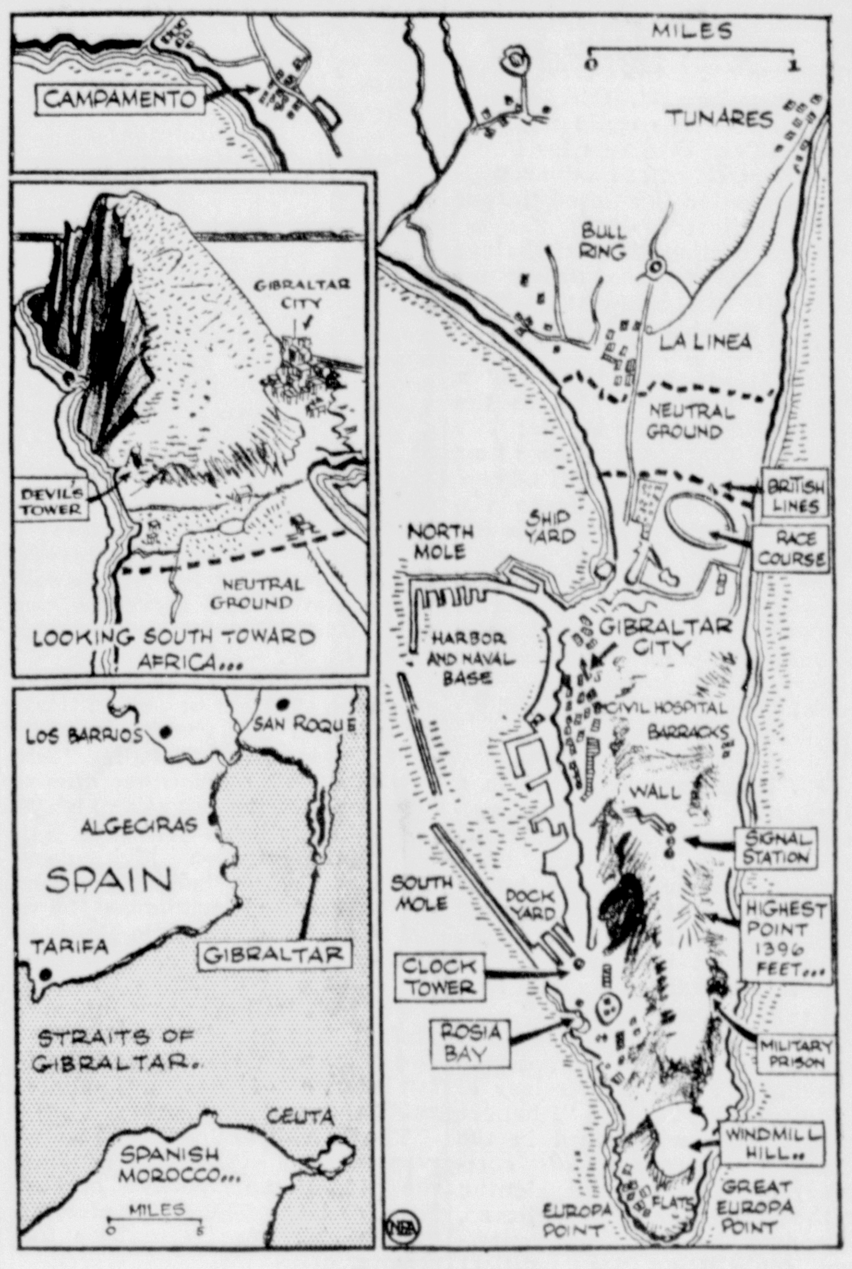
Detroit, July 20 (AP)—Developments in Detroit's trucking strike, which has kept 1,800 drivers idle since last Tuesday midnight, simmered down to a number of legal arguments today, with little hope of a week-end settlement.

Counsel for the Greater Detroit Cartage Association committee argued that the strike was illegal since strikes against public utilities require 30-day notice, instead of the usual five-day notice. Union counsel replied that the state had already recognized the strike by accepting the five-day notice.

AVIATORS REUNION

Pontiac, July 20 (AP)—Selfridge Field, Mt. Clemens, sent out a call today for more than 5,000 aviation veterans of the World War who served at the field between April 6, 1917, to Nov. 11, 1918. Field officials plan a huge reunion at the field Aug. 7 for the entire wartime personnel.

Faces Sternest Test



A Closeup of Gibraltar.

German troops are reported filtering into Spain. Francisco Franco clamors for the return of the Rock of Gibraltar to Spanish rule.

British control of that forbidding western gateway to the Mediterranean is threatened as never before.

For more than two centruies the "Rock" has stood as a constant reminder to passing ships of the might of the British Empire. Now is is slowly strangling Italy's sea commerce.

Gibraltar's two square miles have been much fought over. The Moors and the Spaniards battled back and forth for centuries until the British seized the Rock in 1704, then withstood a severe Spanish and French siege in 1779-1783 to establish the control which has stood since then.

In that time, the Rock has been impregnable. But now military experts wonder whether its bristling guns could stand effective guard in the face of a prolonged attack by long-range guns and airplanes.

Batteries near Ceuta, across the straits in Spanish Morocco, are trained on the Rock, as are others on the Spanish mainland, near Algeciras.

Conseus of military men is that the guns of Gibraltar could still close the straits; whether they could keep them closed is more doubtful.

French Parents Seek Legion Of Lost Babes

BY ALICE MAXWELL

Paris, July 15 (AP)—(Via Berlin—Delayed)—With an unending stream of pitiful little want-ads, the mothers and fathers of France are searching today for their legion of lost children.

These poignant paragraphs in the thin columns of Paris' newspapers thunder with simplicity the story of a vanished host of little people.

They tell of babies, boys, girls—and parents, too — lost, with scarcely a trace, in the exodus of civilians fleeing the overwhelming German advance.

Where Are They?

Where are they? But read the little ads:

"Will the woman who rescued a two-months-old baby girl from a camion (army truck) at the bridge of Orleans please give her whereabouts?" . . .

"Kilbs, seeking daughter Christiane, confided to her school teacher for evacuation and disappeared since June 16 from Neufchatel.'

"Two boys and a girl sought by their parents—Charles, George and Denise Tricot—lost June 15 at the bridge of Thomery."

"Jean Paul Lefevre, 6, lost June 17 seven kilometers from Gien."

Jacques Leabeau, 9, lost in the evacuation. Can be identified by brown spot over right eye."

Abandoned by Nurse

"The widow Tola seeks her son, Jean Tola, 15, last seen on a bicycle headed toward Mantes."

More than one ad hints of a faithless servitor. One mother says "two children, Jean Claude and Suzanne, four and five years old, blond, blue-eyed, the same height, abandoned by their nurse to a French military convoy going toward Orleans."

By contrast is the conscientious conduct implied by:

"Michele Vacheron is with nurse . . . Camille."

Some of the one-line ads seem like faint voices, crying in a melancholy wilderness.

One of them:

"Little Claude at Ste. Genevieye is waiting for Robert to come back."

And, another:

"Micheline Vienne — Papa has not come back."

"LIAR, LOUSE" NAMES CALLED

McCrea Called Thief In Ouster Proceedings In Detroit

Detroit, July 20 (AP)—Ouster proceedings against Wayne County Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea bristled with such epithets as "liar" and "louse" today as the accused prosecutor and Thomas Kenney, assistant attorney general, matched charges.

McCrea became angered by Kenney's remark that records introduced in evidence would show warrants were refused in 90 percent of all gambling cases brought to the prosecutor's office.

"We have already proved you have been a thief for the last five years," Kenney said to McCrea.

"I'm sorry to have to call you this," McCrea replied, "but you're a liar."

"Here they are, you louse," McCrea said a moment later as he tossed the records under discussion across the counsel table to Kenney.

Beer To Be Sold At Fair For First Time

Detroit, July 20 (AP)—For the first time since 1937 beer will be sold at the Michigan state fair this year, according to a ruling yesterday by the board of managers.

Linwood W. Snow, general manager, said the action was taken "because the public wants beer."

Two Rivers Folks Have Snow Battle

Two Rivers, Wis., July 20, (AP)—Two Rivers residents made merry in the snow tonight while the rest of Wisconsin sweltered in above 90 degree temperatures.

Snow buried last winter was unearthed for a rousing snowball fight as this little town resting on a peninsula jutting seven miles out into Lake Michigan entertained visitors at its annual snow festival.

BRITISH PLAN TO CARRY WAR TO CONTINENT

NEW ARMY COMMAND TENDS THAT WAY, SAY OBSERVERS

(By The Associated Press)

The prelude to the Battle of the British Isles apparently was nearing its end last night.

Adolf Hitler has presented Germany's last offer—the British must accept Nazi peace terms or face what he says will be destruction.

Ships Chief Target

And the British have answered. Heedless of the fuehrer's "peace offensive," they have rejuvenated their army command and, even while Nazi bombs burst from coast to coast, begun thinking of carrying the fight back to the German-mastered continent.

Unless Britain surrenders, declared the well-posted Italian weekly, Relazioni Internazionali, "the landing of German troops on the island is logically a question of days."

Warplanes are the vanguards of modern armies and Germany sent hers over Britain yesterday in the severest assaults so far on the island kingdom.

Ships, Britain's Achilles Heel, apparently were the chief target. Twice squadrons of Nazi bombers descended on southeast England ports to empty their bomb racks toward strings of British merchantmen.

The Nazi airmen also struck from Scotland to the southern shore and from Wales to the southwest.

Bomb Air Bases

Twelve German bombers were reported officially shot down and at least four others were believed to have been bagged in a fierce sky fight which developed when British defense planes intercepted a German fighter-escorted bombing squadron over a southeast port.

British fliers, the air ministry disclosed, retaliated with night bombing attacks Friday against naval and air bases in Germany and Holland and on Nazi aircraft factories, oil reserves and communications.

That Britain is shifting from a purely defensive war to a strategy aimed ultimately at an offensive on the continent was the verdict of neutral military observers on the selection of General Sir Alan Brooke, tough, seasoned Ulsterman, to command the home forces in place of General Sir Edmund Ironside.

Germany, meanwhile, kept dinning Adolf Hitler's last appeal to reason into English ears as the high command detailed widespread havoc on British and military objectives, including claims of sinking a 5,000-ton merchantman and damaging three others and a destroyer.

Poor Crop Prospects

With the war apparently turning toward a new, crtical phase and Germany tightening her "starvation blockade," on Britain, another winter of hardship in Europe seemed increasingly likely.

A wheat forecast in Bucharest anticipated a Rumanian harvest of 1,630,000 metric tons, compared with a normal yearly average of about 5,000,000.

C. OF C. ASKS BRAKE RELEASE

Take Off Government Restrictions Says National Leader

Washington, July 20 (AP)—The United States Chamber of Commerce urged today that congress, as a defense measure, remove government controls "which act as a brake on our industrial machines."

James S. Kemper, chamber president, in a public statement to 800,000 businessmen - members, said that congress should:

"1. Take immediate steps to eliminate unnecessary public expenditures.

"2. Eliminate present handicaps to the production of essential war materials on an economical basis.

"3. Remove obstacles which tend to block industrial initiative and retard productive effort."

"Business is ready and willing to do its part in meeting any national problem," Kemper said. "Congress and the government's administrative agencies can facilitate the progress of the preparedness program. The time to do it is now."

Bullitt Comes Home; Says Bomb No Dud; May Go Back to Post

BY WADE WERNER

New York, July 20 (AP)—The trans-Atlantic Dixie Clipper brought home from broken France today United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt, who narrowly escaped death in the bombings which preceded the French collapse.

In the same plane came the former Empress Zita of Austria-Hunbary. Driven into European exile when that empire crashed in 1918, she was seeking a new and more distant refuge now—this time from the military conquests of the son of a pre-war Austrian customs offical, Fuehrer Adolf Hitler.

Bomb Wasn't Dud

Neither Bullitt nor the former empress would predict what the next European developments might be.

Bullitt, however, talked freely of what he had seen and experienced in France, and emphasized that "the French people today have all the manificent qualities they always had.'

The ambassador disclosed that bombs dropped on Paris by the Germans came even closer to killing him than first reports indicated.

As originally reported in censored dispatches, one of the 25 bombs dropped on or near the air ministry headquarters, where Bullitt was lunching with French officials, crashed through the ceiling of a room through which they passed, but was a dud.

Actually, the ambassador said, it was a time-bomb. It hung half way through the ceiling, looking like a dud, but an hour later it exploded, demolishing the place.

He said he was deeply impressed with the way the French stood up under the shock of defeat, and spoke with admiration of the efforts of aged Henri Petain to "bring order out of desperate disorder."

Couldn't Keep Contact

After they occupied Paris, he said, the Nazi troops were considerate and correct in their behavior and German military authorities showed the American ambassador and his staff "every courtesy."

"We were under no restraint in the occupied territory, and moved about as we pleased, without escort," he said.

Communications were disorganized, however, and it became impossible for Bullitt to maintain effective confidential contact with the state department in Washington after June 12. There was only one way left for him to make a full report to his government, and that was to go home.

Asked if he expected to return to France, the ambassador replied he had received no instructions to the contrary, and that in the absence of such instructions he could only assume that he would return.

He pointed out, however, that he could hardly discuss future developments until he had conferred with the secretary of state.

Asked a moment later what he thought of England's chances of resisting German invasion, Bullitt retorted:

"That's future, isn't it?"

Several hours after the Dixie Clipper arrived, the Yankee Clipper glided down to the waters of Flushing bay with 35 passengers and 1,843 pounds of mail, from Horta, the Azores, by way of Bermuda.

The Yankee originally left Lisbon, Portugal, last Monday, but was forced by engine trouble to put in at Horta, where the Atlantic Clipper still is being held for repairs.

Aboard the second clipper were Paul Van Zeeland, former premier of Belgium; James Bone, London editor of the Manchester, England, Guadrian, and Madame Esla Schiaparelli, noted Paris dress designer, who arrived hatless with $70,000 in jewels and the plaint:

"I have only the dress I am wearing and scarcely anything else."

Madame Schiaparelli, who came here for a lecture tour, said the once flourishing fashion centers in Paris were at a standstill.

Narcotics Seized, Jap Held In Raid

San Francisco, July 20 (AP)—U. S. customs agents seized 17 pounds, 3 ounces of narcotics aboard a Japanese freighter today in a raid the state narcotics chief hinted would have international ramifications and involve contraband worth more than $1,000,000. A Japanese was arrested.

Paul E. Madden, chief of the California narcotics enforcement division, said the narcotic seizure (cocaine) was the largest "in a long, long time."

Madden said the Japenese, Yoshitomo Wada, 38, was seized by customs agents in the engine room of the Nanman Maru, which docked from the Orient, via Los Angeles, late yesterday.

FDR APPROVES "TWO OCEAN" NAVY MEASURE

WILL PROVIDE 701 FIGHTING SHIPS BY 1946-47

Washington, July 20 (AP)—Prompt action to begin construction of the greatest fleet in world history was promised by the navy department today after President Roosevelt signed a bill authorizing a 70 percent, $4,000,000,000 increase in naval strength.

Within the last 40 days, officials pointed out, construction has been started on 92 vessels previously authorized, thus clearing the way for immediate negotiations on contracts for the first of the 200 combat vessels to be added to the fleet under the new act.

Funds Not Provided

Upon completion of those 200 vessels, scheduled for 1946 or 1947, the United States will have a "two-ocean" navy of 701 fighting ships of 3,547,700 tons.

That record shattering armada would outweigh today's combined fleets of Great Britain and Japan, the two other principal sea powers.

Funds to begin construction of the 200 new vessels were not provided in the bill signed today, but a $178,000,000 appropriation is included in a $936,176,540 bill on which a house committee is scheduled to commence hearings Monday.

Hearings will begin Monday also on President Roosevelt's request of July 10 for $4,848,171,957 in appropriations and contract authorizations for the army and navy to assure "total defense" for the United States.

Draft Training Bill

The senate military committee had hoped to have a compulsory training bill ready to report with the reconvening of congress after the Democratic convention, but Chairman Sheppard (D-Tex) said it would be delayed.

The committee is engaged in redrafting the Burke-Wadsworth bill calling for registration and selective training of all men between 18 and 65 years of age. The revised bill will incorporate changes proposed by the army and navy. Sheppard said it would be ready shortly.

Before the naval expansion program can be pushed to top speed, navy officials said, additional ship construction facilities will have to be provided at both navy and private yards.

It is anticipated that essential elements of the program will be the negotiation of contracts without waiting for competitive bids, as recently authorized by congress, and the duplication of ships already built or building in order to save time in planning and procurement.

And Now It's Taxes Gone With The Wind

Los Angeles, July 20 (AP)—The movie "Gone With The Wind" earned a gross of $12,402,463 up June 9 and paid back 97 per cent of its original cost of $4,800,000 Assessor John R. Quinn said today.

County supervisors, sitting as a special board of equalization to determine the valuation of the negative and 14 color prints of the production, upheld Quinn's assessment at $500,275. Selznick International Pictures, Inc., and Loew's, Inc., producers and distributors, respectively, had urged that the valuation be cut to $134,615.

HULL SEEKING OTHER VIEWS

Parries Queries About U. S. Plans As Havana Meet Opens

BY J. C. STARK

Havana, July 20 (AP)—The United States delegation became the center of intense activity tonight in informal conversations aimed at formulating proposals on hemisphere defense and economy at the second meeting of American foreign ministers opening here tomorrow.

The arrival of Secretary of State Hull, with his staff of diplomatic, trade, monetary and agricultural advisers, opened preliminary consultations in which officials of the other American republics sought first to hear details of the United States proposals.

The quiet, unostentatious Hull, however, adopted the role of a "listener" to get a clear picture of the problems facing each of the other countries, before disclosing just how the United States proposes to help them.

Argentine Absent

Absent from these preliminary talks was the Argentine delegation, from which is expected to emanate the chief obstacles to Hull's hoped-for unanimity among the 21 republics on measures to safeguard the security and economy of the new world.

The delegation from Argentina, a country which already is showing signs of resistance to any plans which might further disrupt its trade with European countries, does not arrive until Monday morning, when the business sessions begin.

While Hull guarded carefully any proposals that he brought from Washington, officials of other countries forecast definite steps at this meeting to immunize all the Americas against any military or trade threats that may grow out of the European war.

Despite the absence of military experts from the United States and most of the other delegations, some quarters predicted at least preliminary action on joint military plans for this hemisphere.

What form this might take was uncertain, but some sources foresaw measures to bring about continuing and close-working arrangements among all the nations on all questions of a military nature.

NAZI NOTE WITHDRAWN

San Jose, Costa Rica, July 20. (AP)—The government announced tonight that the German legation had withdrawn the note of two weeks ago in which it expressed hope that Central American nations would do nothing "unneutral" at the Havana conference of foreign ministers.

The withdrawal, the government reported, was made by German Minister Otto Reinbeck, with apologies, in a cable from Havana, where he has gone to watch developments at the sessions opening tomorrow.

Earlier today, Central American diplomats had heard that their chancelleries would lay the Reinbeck memorandum before the Havana conference.

Sawyer Will Not Direct Treasurer Dunckel's Campaign

Monroe, Mich., July 20 (AP)—With announcement that he was lending his name "to no one's candidacy" in the approaching primary campaign, Rep. Robert N. Sawyer, Monroe Republican, spiked State Treasurer Miller Dunckel's statement today that he would direct Dunckel's campaign for the G. O. P. gubernatorial nomination.

Dunckel, who formally placed his name before the voters yesterday when he filed his petitions at Lansing, said Sawyer would manage his campaign among young Republicans. At the same time, William C. Bishop, president of the Michigan young Republican federation, said Sawyer's resignation from his office in that organization resulted "from an interest in some other candidate."

Sawyer had accompanied his letter of resignation with a charge that bishop's $5,000-a-year state job biased him in favor of Governor Luren D. Dickinson.

Rep. Sawyer, informed of Dunckel's "appointment," said the state treasurer had used his name "without any authorization."

Escanaba Has 80 Degrees; Rest Of Nation Swelters

Even Escanaba felt the heat yesterday, when the thermometer reached, but did not pass, the 80 degree mark for the first time this year.

Following is how it was over the rest of the nation:

Chicago, July 20 (AP)—The worst heat wave of the summer engulfed most of the eastern half of the nation today.

Twelve deaths were attributed directly to the sweltering siege, while nine persons who sought temporary relief in cooling waters drowned.

Thousands of residents of states between the Rocky Mountains and the Atlantic seaboard hurried to beaches and woodlands for the week-end when forecasters reported no general break in the sultry spell was in sight.

Temperatures in the nineties were common in many cities. Washington's 96.6 and Baltimore's 96 established new tops for the season.

Readings of 95 in Des Moines and Kansas City and 92 in Cleveland and Detroit provided samples of the abnormal conditions in the midwest.

Chicago's 94 brought the largest crowds of the summer to forest preserves, parks and shore line.

New York City's maximum was 89.6. It was accompanied by oppressive humidity. Louisville reported a maximum of 91.

Heat deaths included: South Dakota, two; New York state, two; Wisconsin, two; Minnesota, one; Pennsylvania, two; Nebraska, one; New Jersey, one; Kansas, one.

Drownings reported were: Minnesota, three; Pennsylvania, three; Indiana, two; Maryland, one.

Marie Holmgren Passes Away Here

Miss Anna Ruth Marie Holmgren, 1113 Ludington street, passed away at seven o'clock yesterday evening. She had been ill since the first of July of complications.

Miss Holmgren was born June 12, 1900, and had lived here all her life. She was a member of the Bethany Lutheran church and the Morning Star society.

She is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Ellen Ohlson of Chicago, Mrs. Victor A. Johnson of Escanaba and Miss Lillian Holmgren, also of Escanaba.

The body was taken to the Anderson Funeral Home, and will lie in state Sunday evening.

The funeral services will be Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the funeral home, with Rev. C. A. Lund officiting. Burial will be in the family lot in Lakeview cemetery.

Escanaba Golfers Wham Away In 1st Stunt Day Tourney

Seventy-five or more Escanaba Golf club members and guests teed off with baseball bats yesterday afternoon in the first stunt day and goofy golf program ever conducted here.

The score didn't make much difference. Most of the players felt happy if they hit the ball.

Among the handicaps: Shooting with just three clubs, driver, putter and niblick, and with the driver very often from the fairway, rough, or where were you. Shooting while standing with both feet in a bushel basket. Shooting while standing on one foot. Shooting from a stance inside a bucket. Whaming at a ball waving atop a length of garden hose.

And all this had to be done between laughs and despite the heckling of one's opponents and a goodly gallery.

It was the first, but the players decided it should not be the last such tourney.

Today, Escanaba Golf club entertains Marquette club members in a guest-day tournament.

PONTIAC MAN DROWNS

Pontiac, Mich., July 20. (AP)—Lyle Sage, 50, of near here, drowned today in Loon lake. Police seeking the body said they had been unable to determine whether Sage, a cripple, had been bathing or fishing.

PEEK, WILLKIE TALK AG PLAN

Getting Views of Many On Program, Nominee Says

BY WILLIAM B. ARDERY

Colorado Springs, July 20 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie received a comprehensive outline of a new farm program today from George N. Peek, former agricultural adjustment administrator, but the nominee made plain that Peek's was only one of many suggestions he would consider in drafting the farm section of his acceptance address.

Peek, who left the new deal administration because of his disagreement with its reciprocal trade policies, read a lengthy memorandum on his views at Willkie's afternoon press conference. It advocated among other things, retention of "desirable features" of existing farm legislation.

Willkie said he asked Peek to come here for a chat about farm problems and added he was "trying to get the viewpoint of a number of people on the agricultural situation" and that he would make his own decisions later.

Willkie did express interest in one statement by Peek—that if all wealth comes from productivity then the emphasis should be placed on the production of wealth rather than on its restriction.

Peek said he thought many new deal measures had been restrictive. Questioned about the reciprocal trade treaties, the former administration official said "I never have thought they were worth a damn and I haven't changed my mind."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R-Mich) was among those who suggested Willkie talk with Peek.

Dies Investigators Told That New York Is Easy Prey In War

Beaumont, Tex., July 20 (AP)—The Dies committee heard today that New York City could be rendered swiftly uninhabitable through information obtained by the Communist party from a WPA writers' project.

George Hurley and Steve Birmingham, investigators for the house committee investigating unAmerican activities told Chairman Dies (D-Tex) the project had unearthed complete information of New Yorks nerve centers of industry, communication, transportation and food and water supply.

Utilization of this mass of photographic and charted material would mean, possibly, demoralization of the great city within a space of hours, the witnesses asserted.

In New York, however, Lieut. Col. Brehon B. Somervell, WPA administrator, said "no one need be alarmed" at the testimony, adding the writers project had obtained only information readily available to anyone interested.

The material pertained to water supply, subways, food and milk centers, electricity, railroads, gas supplies, bridges, water mains, terminals and police and fire department signal systems.

Fifty Four Yachts In Mackinac Race

Chicago, July 20 (AP)—Fifty-four yachts, largest in the history of the event, scooted out of Belmont harbor today in the annual race to Mackinac Island, Mich., a a minimum of 331 miles.

Under favorable conditions, the winner should cross the finish line Tuesday morning.

The first landfall will be Little Sable Point, Mich., 88 miles up the lake. Then the yachts will sail up the Michigan coast to Big Sable Point and Point Betsie, and then through the Manitou passage.

The largest boat in the race is the Tamaris, a steel-hulled ketch owned and sailed by Ralph Friedman of the Milwaukee Yacht club. The Tamaris must give a time allowance of 14 hours, 10 minutes and 2 seconds to the smallest craft in the cruising division, the Duchess, a cutter sailed by Hobart Olsen of the Milwaukee Yacht club fleet.

Garner In Huff? Says Little, But Packs His Bags

Washington, July 20 (AP)—Vice President Garner, foe of a third term for Franklin Roosevelt, packed away some office belongings today, expressed his private views to a few senatorial cronies and, friends said, made ready to quit the capital.

His friends said Garner planned to go to his Uvalde, Texas, home to vote in the primary elections on July 27, and might stay there, leaving congress, the administration and the Democratic party to their own devices.

Can't Participate

Because of his third term views, his associates said, the 71-year-old Texan felt he could not participate in the campaign for President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace, nominated to succeed Garner as vice president.

Garner declined to say whether he had sent any congratulatory message to the president or Wallace, but friends said they understood he had not.

The third term issue had a prominent part elsewhere in the day's political developments:

Former Democratic Senator James A. Reed of Missouri offered to join with Senator Burke (D-Neb) in organizing Democrats opposed to a third term.

The Harrisburg, Pa., Patriot, newspaper published by Vance A. McCormick, former Democratic national chairman, announced its support of the Republican presidential nominee, Wendell L. Willkie.

Wallace to Stay

Rep. Ditter (R. Pa) said in a statement that "hundreds of volnuteer workers" in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, including "many patriotic Democrats" had joined "in revolt against the overt threat of dictatorship as now presented in the violent overthrow of the third term tradition by the New Deal convention at Chicago."

Wallace announced at Des Moines, Iowa, that he did not plan to resign his post as secretary of agriculture, saying that "I believe Herbert Hoover remained in the cabinet (as secretary of commerce) when he was campaigning for the presidency." Republicans, contending the agriculture department could exert vast political power, indicated they would make a campaign issue of Wallace's failure to resign.

Some rules for campaigning in this and subsequent federal elections became effective when President Roosevelt signed the Hatch bill. The measure, sponsored by Senator Hatch and Rep. Dempsey, both New Mexican Democrats, restricts political activity by state and local government workers paid in whole or part from federal funds. It affects about 300,000.

The new legislation also places a limit of $3,00,000 a year on expenditures by the national committes of political parties and limits to $5,000 the contribtuion of any individual or organization to a party committee.

ROOSEVELT RESTING

Washington, July 20, (AP)—President Roosevelt extended his Potomac river cruise today as he rested from the late hours he kept during the Democratic national convention.

The chief executive left the heat of the capital Friday night on the yacht Potomac, intending at that time to be gone only 24 hours.

But, evidently enjoying the trip thoroughly, he sent word to the White House that he would not be back until Sunday.

On his return from the cruise, Mr. Roosevelt will leave by train for a visit to his home at Hyde Park, N. Y. He may be accompanied by William C. Bullitt, ambassador to France, who has just returned to the United States by plane to confer with the president and Secretary Hull.

The chief executive is expected to return from Hyde Park in time to confer Thursday with Secretary Wallace, his running mate.

reiterated, is solely up to Hitler.

Today the fuehrer had a conference with Count Galeazzo Ciano, Mussolini's son-in-law and Italian foreign minister, who came to Berlin for yesterday's reichstag session. It was, however, described as a courtesy call, since important axis decisions were reached in earlier discussions at Berlin and Munich. Ciano goes home tonight.

ONLY FEW DAYS AWAY

(By The Associated Press)

Rome, July 20, (AP)—Germany's long-awaited attempt to invade England is only a few days away unless the British surrender, an authoritative Fascist source predicted today.

"The English may be more clever on defense than on attack x x x," said the Fascist weekly Relaziooni Internazionali, "but this is a war of constant offensives in which the initiative always is Germany's privilege."

While the Italian high command was acknowledging the loss of the cruiser Bartolomeo Colleoni in yesterday's middle Mediterranean naval battle and claiming the sinking of a British warship, the official Italian news agency, Stefani, forecast the removal of two damaged vessels from Gibraltar because of Italian bombing raids there.

The British authorities, Stefani reported, are considering sending the 42,100-ton battle cruiser Hood and the 22,000-ton aircraft carrier Ark Royal elsewhere for repairs.

Relazioni Internazionali, writing on Adolf Hitler's speech in the reichstag yesterday, said:

"The prologue has been in the air. Now the landing of German troops on the island is logically a question of days."

The likelihood of Italian troops joining the Germans in an attempt to invade England seems to have been discarded by Fascist newspapers generally. They speak only of the impending German action.

Italians now are pointing out that they and the Germans are attacking on two widely different fronts, with the Italian assault aimed at Britain's middle-eastern lifeline and Africa.

RAIDERS SWARM WALES

London, July 21 (Sunday)—Nazi air raiders swarmed back to their almost constant assault on Britain early today, roaring as far westward as Wales before British fighter planes drove them off.

Great fleets of Junkers bombers and Messerschmitt fighters swept across the British coasts all day yesterday in one of the greatest air offensives of the war, keeping British anti-aircraft batteries and fighting planes continually busy.

While the German bombs, like exclamation points to Adolf Hitler's "final appeal" for an axis-dictated peace, found targets across the length and breadth of the island yesterday, Britons insisted they were looking beyond the defense of this gun-girt seat of empire to an eventual British offensive abroad, and handed command of this kingdom's greatest army to tough Ulsterman General Sir Alan Brooke.

At Havana, where a meeting of American foreign ministers opens today (Sunday), the United States delegation was the center of intense activity in informal conversations aimed at formulating proposals on hemisphere defense and economy.

United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull arrived with his staff of advisers but adopted the role of "listener" at the preliminaries to the session.

PANAMA CANAL IS CALLED SAFE

Rep. Byrnes and Others Return From Tour of Inspection

Miami, Fla., July 20 (AP)—Rep. Joseph W. Byrns, Jr., of Tennessee, returning with two other congressmen from an inspection of Panama Canal defenses, declared today the vital waterway was well prepared against surprise attack or sabotage but that more airplanes and pilots were needed.

"I am not at liberty to discuss gun emplacements or anti-aircraft protection," said Byrns, "but I can say this—the protection against air attacks is perfect and any hostile move against the canal from any quarter would be met by a force which undoubtedly would surprise any enemy."

The one weakness he noted, Byrnes added, was the possibility of heavy bombs exploding in Culebra cut and causing a landslide which would block the canal.

"I think more planes and pilots are needed there," he asserted.

With Byrns were Reps C. Arthur Anderson of Missouri and William D. Byron of Maryland.

COLOMBIA PLEDGES AID

Bogota, Colombia, July 20 (AP)—President Eduardo Santos reiterated today a pledge that "no attack or threat of attack against the Panama Canal will be permitted from Colombian territory."

In an Independence Day message to congress, he said Colombian foreign policy was based on cooperation with the United States, but that this country needs economic assistance to maintain its solidarity with the northern republic."

DISTRICTS GAIN IN POPULATION

Congressmen Represent Larger Number of Constituents

(By The Associated Press)

A majority of Michigan's congressmen are representing upwards of 20,000 more persons each than did their predecessor in the national house of representatives in 1930, census figures showed Saturday.

In line with the general increase in the state's population, an Associated Press survey of preliminary figures from census Bureau offices indicated, all congressional districts but one, outside of Wayne county, increased in size.

Largest growth of population occurred in two eastern Michigan districts—the seventeenth, composed of Oakland county and portions of Wayne county, and the seventh, made up of MaCombpties.

The seventeenth, with a population increase of more than 100,000 to a total of 418,335, led all districts in the state and probably is the state's mist populous. Figures for five Wayne county districts are not available, but only two of them had more than 375,000 persons in 1930, and Wayne county's percentage increase in population in the past ten years was not up to the outstate average.

George A. Dondero, Republican of Royal Oak, is the seventeenth district representative.

The seventh district, represented in congress by Jesse P. Wolcott, Port Huron Republican, experienced a growth of nearly 50,000 since 1930 to become the second largest district outside of Wayne county.

Only district to decrease in population was the twelfth, composed of eight counties in the western part o fthe upper peninsula. Its total dropped from 204,608 to 199,528, the only district in the state that has less than 200,000 inhabitants.

Trailing the seventh and 17th in gains, but still reporting ten-year growth of more than 30,000, are the tenth district, in which Bay City is the principal population center, and the sixth, composed of Genesee, Livingston and Ingham counties.

The twelve congressional districts for which 1940 population totals are available, ranked according to size, follow:

District	1940	1930
Seventeeth	418,335	318,146
Sixth	378,966	347,502
Seventh	313,799	264,874
Fifth	305,290	295,369
Eighth	294,992	277,224
Second	284,179	260,168
Third	282,863	161,506
Fourth	242,674	225,111
Ninth	235,939	214,318
Eleventh	222,515	204,710
Tenth	218,383	186,738
Twelfth	199,528	204,608

Populations of the five Wayne county districts in 1930 were: First, 380,155; fifteenth, 378,630; thirteenth, 354,135; fourteenth, 350,212, and sixteenth, 318,919.

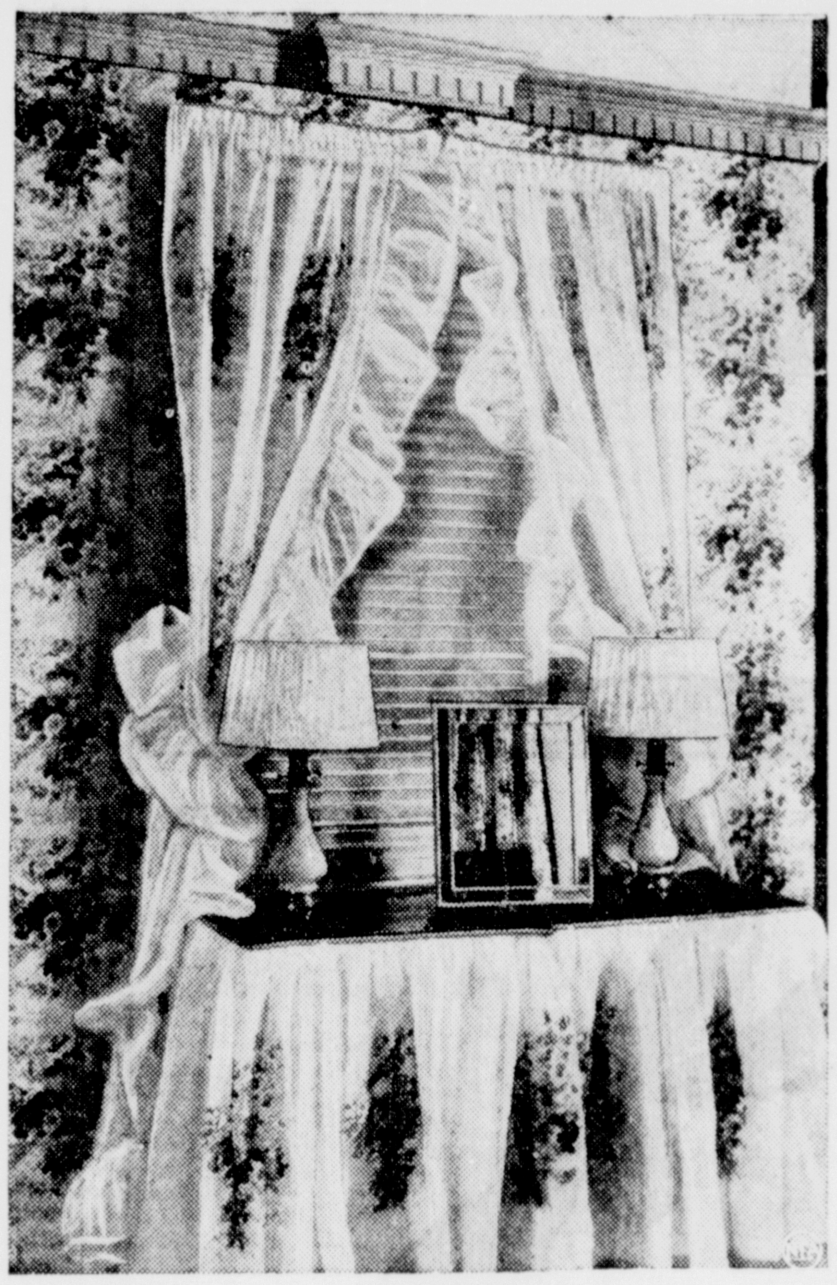
Summer Matchmaking



Cool as a breeze is this decoration idea for summer bedrooms. The crisp white organdy curtains and matching skirt on the dressing table, which has a plate glass mirrored top, are appliqued with clusters of flowers to match the wall paper bouquets. Following the same general theme, any woman would be able to stencil matching designs on curtains, dressing table skirt and the wall areas above and around a vanity. (From Lord and Taylor, New York)

Big Defense Program Is Help To Payrolls

BY FRANK MacMILLEN

New York, July 20, (AP)—The $10,000,000,000 defense program has given impetus to an unusual summer upswing in factory payrolls and employment, business reports said today.

Many thousands of workers, the reports indicated, have found jobs in private industry since production curves in steel, machine-building, arms factories and other plants turned upward in May following a winter and early spring business slump.

New Autos Coming Out

Extending the summer's advance, latest figures in the Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity portrayed factory operations generally at the highest July level since 1929. This guage of industry has climbed from 93.6 late in April to 106.7 per cent of the 1929-30 level. A year ago it was 90.4.

Rail loadings, electric power consumption, cotton textile manufacturing, steel output and residential building all have contributed to further gains the last few weeks.

The giant motor industry—a leader in the earlier stages of the rise—is making an early shift to production of new models this year, causing a falling off in assemblies of old models.

Motor producers, however, have felt the unusual summer push forward in a contra-seasonal improvement in demand for automobiles. Trade reports said July sales of cars may top the June total, upsetting the normal trend for a June-to-July decline.

Business commentators cited the federal reserve board's figures on department store sales. In the Philadelphia, Cleveland, Richmond and Chicago federal reserve districts—where the bulk of industrial expansion has taken place—store sales in the four weeks ended July 13 were 10 to 14 per cent larger than in the comparable 1939 period.

Steel Payrolls Up

Trade analysts attributed the improvement in retail trade in large part to industrial employment and payroll increases.

Steel payrolls for this time of the year were estimated in trade circles above the comparable 1929 figures. Mills were running above 86 per cent of capacity this week and a further moderate gain was forecast for the coming week.

Awards for federal defense works sent the weekly building compilation of the "Engineering News-Record" to an unprecedented total of $217,000,000.

Supplying a big demand for power in manufacturing, steel, construction and other industrial lines, electricity consumption was running at a record-breaking pace.

Out of step with the main march toward higher levels were exports of certain farm products, like cotton, and other goods which have been shut off from the European market since Germany got control of most of the continent.

Afraid of Britain

Likewise speculative markets—stocks and commodities—continued to shuffle slowly in the rear-guard of the business trend. Trading in stocks remained the quietest in many years.

Some commentators suggested markets were afraid of a sudden business setback in this country in event England, too, went down under a Nazi blitzkrieg. British orders have become an important source of business for steel and other lines, not counting the extensive buying of aircraft here.

Stressing this angle, the National Association of Purchasing agents said in its latest bulletin on business:

"It seems to be the concensus of purchasing men that the dominant factor in the rise or fall of commercial levels in America over the next few months will be the rate of success attained by the British in their defensive home stand."

Spokesmen for the purchasing agents attributed recent business gains partly to stocking of inventories.

FISHERMEN ON MOVE, CHARGE

Lake Superior Industry Objects to Invasion By Others

Appleton, Wis. — Spectacular increases in the price of chubs and new and severe restrictions on fishing in Lake Michigan have brought about a migration of Lake Michigan fishermen to Lake Superior waters, according to complaints filed with the state conservation commission here yesterday by Lake Superior fishing fleets.

Mark Catlin, Appleton commissioner, told fellow members that Superior fishermen have written to him asking the commission to take action to prevent the migration. Catlin explained that some quotations on chubs have risen to 27 cents a pound, probably an all time high, and that fishermen who found their rigs outlawed through the new Lake Michigan regulatory order are now moving to Lake Superior, where the stiffer rules do not become effective until next year.

Commissioners informally concluded that they have no authority to restrict the movement of fishermen if they are licensed.

The commission also authorized the purchase of additional quantities of fire fighting equipment which will be placed in service in the central protection area near Camp Williams and Camp McCoy where 70,000 soldiers will be participating in army maneuvers in August.

W. F. Grimmer, director of game propagation, reported to the commission that the conservation department thus far this year has distributed 132,000 day old pheasant chicks to cooperating sportsmen's clubs for stocking throughout the state, and that about 80,000 five-week-old chicks will be distributed soon. The total 1940 stocking program, he said, will slightly exceed last year's volume of 250,000 pheasants.

Black And White Pheasant Hatched

Mason—Strangest pheasant of the thousands hatched this season at the state game farm is one little fellow who's black and white, with an all white breast. It is the lone survivor of four that pecked their way out of their shells as yellow as any domestic chicks. The dark stripes of normal chicks were lacking entirely.

The four were hatched from a clutch of nine taken from a nest uncovered in a field by one of the game farm attendants, when mowing.

MOTORIST SENTENCED

Menominee—Fred McGuire, 26, of Wallace, owner of a car that figured in a serious head-on collision on the interstate bridge Sunday night, June 30, was given a maximum sentence of 90 days in jail today by Municipal Judge V. A. Lundgren in Menominee after he pleaded guilty to the infrequently used charge of permitting a person under the influence of liquor to drive his automobile. His driving license was automatically revoked for a year under the statute.

Nine persons were injured when McGuire's car crashed head-on with another automobile carrying five persons. Four persons were riding in the McGuire machine. In court this morning McGuire showed the scar of an eight to 11 inch gash on his forehead.

RITES MONDAY FOR PUBLISHER

Masons, Others to Attend Funeral for Robert H. Wright

Robert Wright

Munising, July 20 — Funeral services for Robert H. Wright, 73 year old pioneer Alger county resident and newspaper publisher, will be held here on Monday afternoon from the Bowerman Funeral Home at 2 p. m. The Rev. Frederick T. Steen, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will officiate at theservices. Burial will be in Maple Grove cemetery here.

Active pallbearers will be William Duffet, Ray Sundberg, Julius Thorson, William Joslin, E. A. Potter and Alfred Evensen. Honorary pallbearers will be Dr. George Trueman, F. E. Marsh, Albert Oas, James Hosking, William Berkel, E. P. Kling and Adolph Bjornstad.

Mr. Wright, who died Friday, was born in Harbor Springs, then called Little Traverse, on February 22, 1868. At the age of 12 he entered the printing business as an apprentice and in 1888 came to Au Train where he started a newspaper. Following this he spent a few years in Newberry and Harbor Springs and returned later to Munising.

In 1896, when Munising was organized as a village, he started the first newspaper here, The Munising News.

Mr. Wright spent much time studying and writing books on Indian legends. A plaster plaque with an Ojibway legend as its theme, was placed in the Munising postoffice last August by its artist, Hugo Robus of New York City. The subject was selected by the fine arts division of the U. S. treasury department and is one of a number of Indian themes found in the booklet, "Legends of the Chippewa," written by Robert H. Wright. The author was known as an authority on the manners, customs and culture of the Ojibways.

Mr. Wright married Miss Anne O'Donnell September 30, 1889.

Surviving him are his wife, postmaster here since 1934, a daughter, Miss Beulah Wright of Sault Ste. Marie, four sons, George and Joseph of Munising, Robert H. Wright, Jr., of Green Bay, Wis., and Lloyd of West Bend, Wis., a granddaughter, Virginia Wright of Munising, and three other grandchildren.

Mr. Wright had written French Canadian dialect stories for the Detroit Free Press and devoted 59 years of his life to newspaper work and writing. Three pages in the "Centennial History of Michigan," edited by George N. Fuller and published in 1939, are devoted to his life.

All Munising Masons are requested to meet at the Masonic Hall on Monday at 1:30 p. m. to attend the funeral services.

Return From Mrs. John Evans Rites

Munising, July 20—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rousseau, Mrs. Anna Tourville and John and George Schilling returned home Thursday evening after attending the funeral of their sister, Mrs. John M. Evans, 55, of Saginaw. Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at 8:30 o'clock in the family home and at 9 o'clock in St. Peter and Paul's church with the Rev. John J. Sonefeld officiating. Burial was made in Mount Olivet cemetery, Saginaw.

Mrs. Evans was born September 5, 1884, in Michigamme, later living in Ewen and Munising. In 1918 she was married to Mr. Evans in Detroit and resided there until 1921 when they moved to Saginaw.

Survivors include her husband, a son, John C, and three daughters, Mrs. Edward Michalski of Carrollton, Nellie and Mary Jane of Saginaw; two grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. Joseph Rousseau and Mrs. Tourville; four brothers, Peter, John and George Schilling of Munising and Charles Schilling of Sault Ste. Marie.

Paving Four Blacks Will Begin Monday

Munising, July 20—Paving of four blocks of city streets, one on West Onota, one on Chestnut and two on Hemlock, will begin Monday by L. W. Brumm, Marquette contractor. The construction was authorized a few weeks ago by the city commission and will cost approximately $10,000.

A crew of 20 men, all local labor except skilled men, will be employed on the project and four or five Munising trucks will be used. The cement will be furnished by the Munising Coal company and the Munising Hardware company.

MUNISING BRIEFS

Pine Ridge Man Is Arrested for Drunken Driving

Axel Malmstad of Pine Ridge pleaded guilty in Justice H. E. Ranguette's court yesterday to a charge of driving a vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquors.

Malmstad was arrested early Saturday morning by city police after being involved in an accident with Donald McLean, 102 South Sixth, at the corner of Stephenson and Ludington at 1:15 o'clock in the morning. McLean told police he was driving south on Stephenson avenue and making a left turn onto Ludington with the green light in his favor when struck by Malmstad.

The Pine Ridge man was ordered to pay a fine of $50 and court costs.

Mrs. G. R. Stegath Has Broken Ankle

Mrs. G. R.Stegath, 922 Seventh avenue south, tripped on a step leading to the outside of her cottage on the Ford River road last night and broke her left ankle.

She was taken to St. Francis hospital where she is receiving treatment.

It's A Start

THE Upper Peninsula Development Bureau has made a good start toward a more effective tourist advertising program by its decision to reduce the cost of producing its Lure Book.

An estimated savings of $4,000, to be achieved by reducing the size of the Lure Book and the elimination of expensive art work, would be used for newspaper and magazine advertising.

After all, the Lure Book is admittedly an impressive presentation of the Upper Peninsula's recreational attractions, but unless it is put into the hands of the right prospects it does not fully serve its purpose as an advertising medium. Like Florida, California, Maine and other regions that are doing a good job of attracting tourists, the Upper Peninsula must do extensive newspaper and magazine advertising to tell its story to a large public. The inquiries the Bureau receives as a result of this advertising furnishes a list of good prospects to whom the Lure Book should be sent.

Besides its function as an advertising medium, however, the Lure Book fills a very important need in making its possible for the Bureau to take advantage of the $25,000 state advertising fund. The membership plan of financing the Bureau fell down several years ago, and Lure Book was started as a means of getting the funds to support the organization's work.

The plan to make the Lure Book produce a greater profit that can be used for outside advertising is commendable. It is hoped that it will really work out as promised.

Back to the Farm

THE "back to the farm" movement has gone past a mere fad and become a definite population trend. During the past 10 years about two million people have returned to rural living, and the 1940 farm population is estimated at 32,245,000, the highest in 24 years and very close to the all-time high reached in 1916.

Part of this increase is due to the excess of births over deaths among farm people, which is higher than in the cities. Urban unemployment also has decreased the urge to leave the farm to go and "make good in the city."

But another factor is the increasing attractiveness of farm life. Under modern conditions, with good roads, electrification, and labor-saving machinery, there is less and less difference between the living standard in the country and in the city. We are on the way toward a new kind of living which will combine as never before the best things of both country and city life.

Now It's Unanimous

EVERY one of the 48 states now has a state law enforcement agency, a police force or highway patrol. Creation of such a force in Wisconsin makes the roll-call of states complete, the International Association of Police Chiefs notes.

The first was the famous Texas Rangers, organized 105 years ago to combat cattle rustlers and alien-smuggling. Pennsylvania's state police, organized in 1905, was really the pioneer of the "auto-age" forces.

Interstate transport and travel by road, as well as the increasing traffic problem on all rural roads which followed the universal use of the auto made this inevitable. Generally speaking, state forces of this kind have been effective because free from the local influences that hamper city police.

Again the state as laboratory is evident, the system whereby other states may profit by the experience of one, adopting such measures as have been found good in some neighboring state. Thus, slowly and without central compulsion, we arrive at as much unity of procedure among the states as seems desirable and good.

Exit the Country Doctor

IF the population of the United States could be geographically arranged so that each physician would have an equal number of persons to treat in the event of sickness, there would be one physician for each 800 inhabitants. The number of persons for each physician has been increasing for several decades, although medical colleges are graduating a larger number of young physicians each year. Medical facilities in general are also increasing.

In most of the Southern and Western States there is one physician to approximately 1250 people. States in these sections are largely rural, and according to a survey made by the General Education Board, the number of physicians in all rural sections, including towns of 1000 to 2000 population, is rapidly decreasing each year. Almost one-third of the towns with a population of 1000 or less with physicians 15 years ago have none now. It is believed that country doctors will disappear within the next 25 years.

Relatively few medical graduates locate in small towns and distinctly rural districts. New methods of transportation and improved highways have in part contributed to this condition, not always detrimentally. Although physicians may reach patients in a short time by the use of automobiles, the practice of mileage charge as a part of the fee has had a tendency to discourage calling a physician except in cases of extreme illness.

From the 80 medical schools in the United States approximately 4000 physicians graduate each year, replacing that number of physicians who die or retire from active duty. The annual physician increase approximates 500—a sufficient number to correspond with the increase of population.

Since the tendency of the medical profession is toward specialization, more than 20,000 physicians limit their work to a particular field, while a slightly larger number make a specialty of certain types of diseases but do not limit their practice. This tendency toward specialization has had its direct effect on small towns and rural communities.

A GOOD BREAK, ANYWAY
(Iron Mountain News)

The Grand Rapids Press raises the question why Frank McKay was kept off the executive committee for the Willkie campaign after he had been given assurances that he would have a place on it. Was it because of business or political activities or affiliations? it asks. Was it because of the Bluewater bridge incident? McKay, the Press says, was instrumental in guiding the Michigan delegation to Willkie and "thereby earned the kindly regard of the G.O.P. presidential candidate."

McKay blames Hal H. Smith, of Detroit, counsel for the Michigan Manufacturers' association, for his failure to make the committee. Smith, he says, got in touch with the counsel for the national committee, Henry P. Fletcher, and advised him that the party would be better off if McKay were not placed on the committee. According to McKay, Fletcher called Senator Vandenberg, who is supposed to have acquiesced in the proposal, but McKay accepts the senator's assertion that this was not the case. He attributes Smith's activity to pique because of his failure to secure the post of national committeeman.

Whoever had a part in keeping McKay off the committee did the party in Michigan good service. If McKay were primarily interested in the success of the party he would not have been a candidate for national committeeman. He knows as well as the next man that there are a large number of Republicans in the state who distrust his purposes and his leadership. He knows that the more he projects himself into the limelight the more probability there will be that numbers of these Republicans will go over the line to the Democrats.

But McKay is not primarily interested in the Republican party. He is interested primarily in McKay. He must know that if he had been put on the Willkie advisory committee Willkie's strength in the state would have been weakened rather than enhanced. But, despite this knowledge, he went angling for the honor. Fortunately for Willkie and fortunately for the party in the state his angling came to naught.

His incumbency of the office of national committeeman is sufficient load for the party to carry in a year when it should be traveling as light of liabilities as possible.

SHIPS TO SAVE THE CHILDREN
(Christian Science Monitor)

Thousands and thousands of children in Great Britain are facing the horrors of total war.

Does this mean anything to Americans? Evidently it does mean something, for through various organizations and individual action homes have been found in the United States for great numbers of these young evacuees—if they can be brought over.

On the other side, it is reported that applications had been made for more than 100,000 to be transported to British dominions and the United States—before the Government in London regretfully announced that the whole program "must be postponed for the present" due to lack of sufficient naval vessels to convoy the ships.

For a time it appeared that official red tape was the hampering factor in preventing a quick mass exodus of these unoffending victims of war before the German invasion. Now the American Government has acted to simplify regulations, to admit some refugees as temporary visitors, to accept affidavits of organizations as assurance of the child's care, and to have papers ready at all times for about 10,000 children beyond those for transportation is available.

Doubtless sensitive to isolationist sentiment, the American official attitude has been that the problem of providing safe transport for these thousands of children is exclusively a British responsibility. Will American public sentiment be content to take this attitude? Can Americans live in peace with their own consciences if they smugly leave tens of thousands of bewildered youngsters to their fate among whistling bombs and bullets?

One of the less comprehensible and less admirable phases of American attitudes toward events abroad during this war is the fact that thousands in the United States appear consciously to have steeled themselves against any appeals of sympathy, against any distinctions between right and wrong, against any response not based on cold self-interest regardless of what may happen to the rest of the world and civilization.

This attitude aims, of course, at assuring that the United States shall not become involved in the war. But there is at least one possible way of assisting in the evacuation of British children without becoming a participant in the war.

This method would require one minor amendment of the Neutrality Act. It would contemplate the sending of Red Cross ships to England or Ireland to bring as many as possible of the evacuee children to American shores. The Neutrality Act of 1939 specified that American Red Cross ships might carry workers and supplies to ports in the war zones which are forbidden to marchant ships flying the American flag. An amendment adopted only last month removed the requirement that authorities must first obtain assurances of safe conduct from the belligerents.

In the case of ships for the English children it would be desirable to ask for safe conduct assurances from the German Government notwithstanding this exemption. If Reichsfuhrer Hitler should ask whether American would be willing to do the same for German children, the answer would be "yes," though it is unlikely he would permit them to leave the Fatherland.

Authors of the neutrality legislation could hardly foresee that such a situation as this might arise. Hitherto the need has been only for carrying aid abroad. Legal provision exists for rescue ships to bring stranded American citizens back home, but not to transport persons of another nationality to the United States. The National Maritime Union has offered to furnish seamen without pay for such a mission. Undoubtedly Red Cross contributors would be glad to have their money used for the expenses of such voyages, and the Maritime Commission could assist in furnishing vessels.

Such ships, according to present law, would travel clearly identified, unarmed and without convoy. If one of them were sunk, the offense would not be against the United States so much as against the morality and sensibilities of mankind. But surely one can trust that vessels on a purely humane errand would be allowed to go unmolested.

Congress on its return to session next week should act instantly to amend the Neutrality Act so as to permit this use of American ships. The enactment ought not to require more than a few days.

INTELLIGENCE AND HAY FEVER
(Pittsburgh Press)

It's hard to get any real satisfaction out of a violent attack of hay fever. But science, that purveyor of hope to the hopeless, has now come to bat with a thesis that may make hay fever almost a pleasure.

Dr. Buenaventura Jiminez of the University of Michigan has come to believe that there is a definite relationship between allergy and intelligence. Ten years ago, he thought he noted an ususual numbr of high-honor students among his allergy patients. He kept records. It proved out mathematically, believes Dr. Jiminez.

So the next time you are rocked and racked by sneezes and reduced to that pitiable pulp that is the fate of the hay-fever victim, console yourself with the thought, "Gosh, I'm smart!"

World Affairs Reviewed

The reaffirmed determination of Eire (formerly the Irish Free State) to accept no troops from England in protecting itself against possible German invasion, again focusses attention on the small but turbulent island off the west coast of Great Britain.

Eire is a sovereign, independent country, although associated with the British Commonwealth of Nations, says a special bulletin from the National Geographic Society. It occupies the southern four-fifths of the Irish island. The other fifth, Northern Ireland, is still united with Great Britain, its local parliament subordinate, in such matters as foreign policy, to that of the Empire.

—"TWO IRELANDS"—

Sharp temperamental differences distinguish predominantly Catholic Eire from predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland, with its strong English and Scottish elements. Geographically, however, the two sections have much in common. Largely plain, surrounded by an irregular rim of mountains whose rounded summits are more like hills, they offer few natural barriers to invasion. At Dublin, Eire's capital and leading port, directly across the Irish Sea from Liverpool, the central Irish plain pushes all the way to the coast.

The 'two Irelands' also represent sharp contrasts in defense problems. With some 3,000,000 people, Eire's military strength, as estimated before the present crisis, was less than 40,000 men. This force is a volunteer one, since Eire's population is not subject to conscription as is that of Northern Ireland.

The two important air bases of Ireland are both in Eire; one is located near Dublin, the other at Foynes, on the River Shannon. The latter is reported to have cost more than three million dollars.

The chief centers of population and commerce, both in Eire and Northern Ireland, are along the east coast, facing Great Britain. Industrial Belfast, capital of Northern Ireland, holding more than 400,000 people, is only about 40 miles from Scotland, across the Northern Channel. Londonderry, center of the linen-cloth industry at the head of the deep central inlet of Northern Ireland is less than 150 miles from strategic Glasgow, the heart of Britain's steel and shipbuilding activities.

At the southern end of the island, Eire's important ports, Cork and Cobh, are little more than an hour's bombing ride, across the open Atlantic, from former French Brittany, now in German hands.

Interior Irish towns are mostly small ones, whose primary function is to serve as market centers for rural produce grown on innumerable tiny farms.

Farming is the most important occupation of the country, north and south, although much of Eire is handicapped by thin soil and over-abundant rainfall.

To some extent, however, rich pasture lands, with luxuriant natural grasses, favored by heavy rains and the mild climate, help make up for the lack of natural resources and fertile ground. Ireland leads the British Isles in cattle production.

Answers To Questions

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

A reader can get the answer to any question of fact by writing The Escanaba Daily Press Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C. Please enclose three (3) cents for reply.

Q. How tall are President Roosevelt and his sons? P. D. R.

A. The President, 6 feet 1 inch; James, 6 feet 3 inches; Elliott, 6 feet 2 inches; Franklin, Jr., 6 feet 3 inches; and John, 6 feet 4 inches.

Q. Who in English history was called Old Silly Billy? H. T. B.

A. King William IV.

Q. Was it ever unlawful to ride on a train on Sunday in Massachuetts? E. B. H.

A. In 1850 a person who took a railroad train on Sunday in Massachusetts was liable to a fine of $10. Railroads permitting passengers other than those journeying to church were punished by having their Sunday trains suspended for two successive Sundays. As late as 1860 the Massachusetts statutes provided that "Whoever travels on the Lord's day, except from necessity or charity, shall be punished by fine not exceeding $10 for each offense."

Q. How much money did Andrew Carnegie leave to Justice Taft? G. B. S.

A. An annuity of $10,000 was left to the late Chief Justice Taft by Mr. Carnegie as a token of personal friendship.

Q. Please give a biography of Walter Pidgeon, who appeared with Deanna Durbin in "It's a Date." W. M. R.

A. Mr. Pidgeon was born at East St. John, New Brunswick, Canada, on September 23, 1897. Educated in Canada, his professional career began during the World War when Elsie Janis became interested in his voice. He toured with Miss Janis here and abroad in "At Home" as well as in vaudeville. He has appeared on the stage in "No More Ladies," "Something Gay," "The Night of January 16," and many other productions and also made Victor records before entering the movies.

Q. Have tennis balls always been covered? C. B. D.

A. In the early days balls of Indian rubber were uncovered. The first mention of a white flannel cover appeared in The Field of December 5, 1874.

Q. Is the original manuscript of Mozart's Haffner symphony in existence? T. W. S.

A. The original manuscript of the famous Haffner symphony, in D major, is in the possession of the National Orchestral Association, Inc. of New York City. It is contained in a satin-lined case covered with pale blue velvet, with corners of beaten silver.

Q. Is there any place where schools can get radio script and information on sound effects? J. J.

A. The Educational Radio Script Exchange of the Office of Education, Washington, D. C., supplies script to schools and colleges and also publishes a Handbook of Sound Effects.

Q. Why is syphilis sometimes called the great imitator? E. T. M.

A. Dr. Thomas Parran in "Shadow on the Land" says: "Sir William Osler called syphilis the 'Great Imitator' because in its later stages it simulates every diseas known to man. He added, 'Know syphilis and the whole of medicine is opened unto you.'"

Q. Who was the first aviator to practice glidin? T. H. F.

A. Otto Lilienthal, German inventor and aeronaut, is credited with reducing gliding flight to regular practice. He made over 2000 glides in safety, but on August 9, 1896, his machine was upset by a sudden gust of wind and he was killed near Rhinow, Germany.

Q. How many patents have been taken out by women? R. H. F.

A. According to records of the United States Patent Office at Washington, D. C., more than 15,000 patents have been granted to women.

Q. Where in Canada is the Book of Remembrance? C. B. D.

A. The Book of Remembrance, in which the names of Canadians who died in the World War are inscribed, is in the Peace Tower on Parliament Hill, Ottawa.

Q. Are cabbage and cauliflower the same plant? S. P.

A. Cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, kale, kohlrabi, and Brussels sprouts are all subspecies developed from the wild cabbage of Europe.

Q. How large was the Roman Empire at its greatest extent? C. L. M.

A. Under the Emperor Trajan, 98-117 A. D., the Roman Empire at its greatest extent had an area of only 1,996,000 square miles, more than a million less than continental United States.

20 Years Ago

The Boy Scouts of Escanaba had planned a four or five day camping trip. The camp was to be at Hunter's Point, about a mile north of Maywood. Scout Commissioner R. S. Shaw and Scoutmaster M. B. Melican were to be in charge of the Scouts.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, running for vice-president and Governor Cox, the presidential candidate, were doing a lot of campaigning before the election.

Petitions placing the name of Mary McColl, deputy county treasurer, on the primary ballot as a Republican candidate for the nomination for that office were filed with the county clerk. Every precinct in the county was represented in the petitions.

There seemed to be every prospect that the construction of the trunk line sewer would be under way within a year's time in Gladstone. The city council had discussed the matter in all its phases and the result was that Engineer M. S. McNabb had been authorized to prepare an estimate of the present cost of construction of the sewers. This would take lines on Fourth street, Eleventh street, and Montana avenue and also a disposal plant at the foot of Fourth street.

Local residents and businessmen of Gladstone, interested not only in the city park as a pleasure spot and its maintenance as such, but who also had an eye for the future when it might be possible to convert the park site or a portion of it, into an industrial site for the great advantage of the city had been discussing with no little interest the possibility of the city buying the plot of property adjoining the east end of the present park and lying between Eighth and Fourth streets.

Hollywood Column

BY PAUL HARRISON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

* * *

Hollywood — The time may come when movie patrons, saying, "What shall we see tonight?" will be influenced as much by the names of directors as by the stars.

Right now, Cecil Blount DeMille is the only director whose name has important box-office value. The veteran showman has publicized himself until he personifies the temperament and ostentation and almightiness of Hollywood itself. Frank Capra's name is attractive to fewer but more discerning millions who are beginning to think of it as a standard of dramatic integrity. John Ford has staunch fans. So do Ernst Lubitsch, Leo McCary, and a few others who have become practically independent.

The movies have scores of hack directors who at best are capable of transcribing a detailed script to celluloid without contributing anything to it. Then there's a large group of directors, many of them busy and well paid, who have everything needed for top-notch success except the courage to fight and maybe get fired for their artistic convictions.

Garson Kanin brought Hollywood to its feet with "A Man to Remember" and "The Great Man Votes," a couple of B's which were as excellent as they were economical. When his studio tried to boost him to higher-budgeted but routine assignments, he declared he was not going to direct any glittering trash. He accepted suspension and idleness until the studio finally gave in. Kanin, still only 28, today is considered by Hollywood to be one of the two or three most important creative directors.

* * *

KANIN MAKES HASTE SLOWLY

Here's an example of his unconventional thinking which may prove valuable to the whole industry: Kanin now is directing Carole Lombard and Charles Laughton in "They Knew What They Wanted." During the first 10 days, not a camera turned. Most of the time the cast just sat around a big room and read the script. For a few days, then, the players rehearsed on improvised sets. By this time they knew every line and action. More important, they had developed a feeling for the story as a whole. When filming began, they didn't have to rehearse each scene until they were sick of it.

The scheme seems to have provided extra vitality. But of more measurable benefit to the studio is the fact that, counting the 10 days of rehearsals, the production already is well ahead of schedule.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY PEARSON AND ALLEN

Washington—Biggest chance for Western Hemisphere unity the United States has had in all history presents itself this week at Havana. But also it is the toughest.

The majority of people in Latin America are aroused and worried over Hitler, feel more friendly toward the United States than ever before. But simultaneously, vigorous minority groups in every country, many of them already lined up with Hitler, are doing their best to sabotage Western Hemisphere harmony.

Inside the Brazilian army, for instance, about 40 per cent of the officers admire and lean toward the German military system. In Argentina are some 3,000,000 Italians upon whose passions Mussolini can play. In Uruguay, even after a fifth column Nazi plot to take over the country was exposed publicly, some members of the Uruguayan cabinet thought it was better to close their eyes, not offend Germany. Hitler, they figured, would be too important a customer after the end of this war to risk alienating him.

So it will take all the skill of Cordell Kull's artful diplomacy to bring anything out of the Havana Conference save the usual collection of pious platitudes regarding goodwill, uniform customs procedure and the eradication of the boll weevil.

—RULING FAMILIES—

What most people in the United States do not realize about Latin America is that most of its republics never have been actual democracies. They are a collection of oligarchies, in which the aristocratic families, many of them descended from the Spanish conquistadores, and since grown affluent on copper, tin, meat and coffee, have dominated their countries almost as completely as the Nazis have Germany.

The advent of Hitler, therefor, does not particularly disturb them, except insofar as he is likely to upset their system of land and mineral ownership with a new national socialism.

Actually, the ruling families of Latin America have disliked Roosevelt more than Hitler—up until the last few months. More recently they see Roosevelt as the lesser of two evils. But for seven years they considered New Deal reforms and the tremendous popularity of the President among the Latin American masses as a genuine menace.

It is necessary to draw this very definite distinction between the people of Latin America and their governments. With the people, the United States never has been more popular. To them, Roosevelt has been little less than a saint. His Good Neighbor policy won genuine friends, but with the ruling families it was different.

So the problem of the United States is to continue reaching down below the oligarchies to the people, as Roosevelt has done, but as the aloof gentlemen in the State Department have not done. U. S. diplomats in Latin America mingle with the upper crust, are considered hoity-toity snobs by the majority of the people.

In order to penetrate below the aristocracy, brilliant young Enrique Lozada, ex-counselor of the Bolivian Legation, now a professor at Harvard and Williams, proposes that 5,000 North American students, carefully picked from the finest in the country, go to Latin America to work and live; while 5,000 South American students come to the United States.

He has already started this program by selling the idea to a large group of his own students, and arranging for them to live with Latin American families.

This is the kind of Good Neighborliness which really gets to the roots of things.

—PAN-AMERICAN HIGHWAY—

One big help to Mr. Hull's work at Havana may be a giant road-building program straight through Central America from Mexico to the Panama Canal, in order to strengthen canal defenses.

This is a 3267-mile route, passing through tangled jungles and mountain ranges, which would connect countries some of which have no highways across their borders but depend solely on shipping lanes for communication.

About half of the highway is already built and in fairly good condition. Completion of the rest would cost an estimated $78,000,000. Most radical feature of the plan is that the construction would be transferred from a slow-moving inter-American project, suffering typical Latin delays, to become a U. S. project, using American capital and American engineers.

The highway is already completed from the U. S. border to Mexico City and 200 miles beyond. The road through Guatemala is mediocre, and two-thirds of the route across El Salvador is good. But in Southern Mexico, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica, engineers confront a "road" that is nothing more than a footpath, and in some seasons not even passable on foot.

Advocates of the new plan urge that the U. S. investment would be repaid many times in commercial advantage, by opening up land-wise trade, to say nothing of the strategic advantage of being able to reach the Canal Zone by automobile.

I think a lot of indigo thoughts,
But what's the use to say'em?
It's bad enough I've a case of the blues,
It's badder to up and convey 'em!

Every wonder a lot what it's all about,
And get in the notion of bolting—
Sounding your mouth to the leaden skies
And encourage a little revolting?

But the boat don't need another sour tar,
There's too many now that are rockers,
What she needs is some paint and sails

Yacht Club Stages Annual Summer Regatta Here This Afternoon

EVENTS START AT 2 O'CLOCK

Colorful Boating Races Drawing Crack Field of Skippers

If the weatherman will be good this afternoon the Escanaba Yacht club will stage its fifth annual Midsummer Regatta on the north shore of Little Bay de Noquet.

Like all other events, this one is growing and as a result it will be run in three divisions. The first to start will be the Cruising Division consisting of the Oslo, Mindemoya, Marjac, Onaway, Charlann, and Vagabond. In the second division will be the Sea Gull Fleet consisting of the Kay Jay, Melodie, Carefree, Ah-Mie, Lorrie, Suds, Nautigal, and Alibi. The third division will be made up of all unclassified boats such as the Spray, Escamaid, Stormalong, Viking, Hoysnipe, Siren and others. In all there should be more than twenty-three boats participating in the afternoon events.

In the cruising class, the battle should be between Oslo and Mindemoya, although Marjac is new in the fleet and may surprise. In the Sea Gull division, it is expected that Melodie will add another victory, but as this is not a preliminary race for this class, the contest should be hot and those in the know are inclined to favor Lorrie to take the event.

Unknown Quantity

The free-for-all event is an unknown quantity, but favorites are Spray and St. Martin's new boat which might be considered as the dark horse, although Escamaid is a boat to be reckoned with in any race.

According to the program, Dr. R. H. Banks, port judge of the Green Bay Yacht Racing committee, the cruising division will start at two o'clock, followed at two-fifteen by the Sea Gull fleet and by the free-for-all at two-thirty.

All skippers in each division are requested to meet at the harbor master's quarters at eleven o'clock this morning for final instructions.

Heads Local Club

WALTER HORNSTEIN

Commodore Walter Hornstein, of the Escanaba Yacht club, makes his home at Garden Bay, but with his power cruiser Roamer, he keeps in close touch with the members of the local club and has been exceptionally active along promotional lines. The commodore has visited the most important yacht clubs in Chicago and Milwaukee this year and has recently returned from a trip to Menominee, Sturgeon Bay, Fish Creek and Ephriam in the interests of the annual E. Y. C. cruising race. He reports that from conversations with various yacht club officials the E.Y.C. annual cruising race is the main topic of conversation for plans for the yachting season.

Having had metropolitan newspaper experience, Commodore Hornstein has been successful in getting news stories concerning the Escanaba Yacht club and yacht harbor in the news columns of a score of large dailies in the middle west as well as Yachting Bulletin, the official news organ of the Lake Michigan Yachting association and Yachting magazine.

It was also through his Bay this summer for the Garden trophy and as a result have decided to make it an annual affair.

VENETIAN NIGHT ON WEDNESDAY

Annual Colorful Show of Yacht Club Will Be Held This Week

On Wednesday evening, July 24, the Escanaba Yacht Club will put on its fifth annual Venetian Night. During the last four years with one exception this event has been held under ideal weather conditions and not only attracts the largest crowd for any event, but presents one of the most beautiful spectacles that could be staged on water.

Like many of the efforts of the club, this pageant was started in a small way from a fleet of only four or five boats, each with a mere handful of roman candles, to the participation of more than fifty yachts lighted with flares and enhanced by aerial bombs and rockets from the shore.

Venetian night this year will be another beautiful sight with the usual decorated boats and beautiful lighting effects. Participating yachts will sail from the yacht harbor on the south shore at about eight o'clock to the Little Bay de Noc water stage on the north shore and as soon as darkness falls the signal will be given for the lighting and fire works display which has entertained thousands each year in the past.

Star Spangled Banner.

The last concert will take place at the Luce county park on July 25.

RECREATION DANCE

The Newberry Legion band played for the opening dance at the Newberry recreation hall last Thursday evening. The hall, formerly an old Newberry skating rink, is owned and operated by Con Harris.

The establishment will be open every evening and music for dancing will be furnished by an electric phonograph. Periodically, dances with music by an orchestra will take place.

Mr. Harris intends to serve soft drinks and lunches in connection with his recreation hall. During the winter he may promote basketball and other indoor activities.

In order to select a name for the establishment, Mr. Harris intends to stage a name contest among the young people of Newberry.

STRAWBERRY SOCIAL

A strawberry social was held Thursday evening, July 18, in the Finnish church parlors. Sponsored by the Luther League, proceeds will go toward the League Bible camp.

BAKE SALE

The WBA convention club held a bake sale at the Rahilly store on Friday afternoon, July 19.

BRIEFS

Mrs. Ed DeKiep who underwent an appendectomy at the Newberry clinic last Wednesday is reported to be recovering satisfactorily.

Charles Johnston Pleads Guilty to Charge of Assault

Charles Johnston, well known Escanaba printer, pleaded guilty in Justice H. E. Ranguette's court to a charge of assault and battery. A $10 fine was suspended upon payment of court costs and presentation of a surety bond against disturbing the peace for a year.

Johnston was arrested by city police on complaint of William Early, 210 North 13th street. Early told police he had been attacked about 2:45 Saturday morning at the corner of First Avenue North and Thirteenth street.

Local Favorite n Regatta

John Mitchell's Oslo is the local favorite to capture the annual regatta to be held here today. Mitchell is a former commodore of the Escanaba club.

Mitchell might well be called the spark plug of the Escanaba Yacht club. It was he who called in interested men to form the club. He served the organization as commodore in 1936 and has since been annual reelected to treasurer. As chairman of the cruising race committee he has engineered this event to interest yachtsmen all over Lake Michigan besides sailing his yacht Oslo either in first or second place in all races and regattas since the club has been organized. John is not only well known on Green Bay waters, but as a member of the Lake Michigan Cruising club and has become one of the most active members of that organization as well as the Green Bay Yacht Racing committee.

Annual Cruising Race Is Top Flight Event

The Cruising Race sponsored by the Escanaba Yacht club has, in the space of three short years, grown to be a top-flight event in yachting circles on Lake Michigan, earning recognition and support from metropolitan newspapers as well as from yachting publications and major Great Lakes clubs.

The idea of a port to port race originated with a group of Escanaba yachtsmen who had for years sailed on individual excursions to lower Green Bay ports to take part in races and regattas, and who decided that an organized cruise and race would provide more sport for themselves, as well as to eventually attract other skippers who normally cruised on Green Bay individually and who might be interested in the racing angle.

The first Cruising Race in 1938 was sailed first to Ephraim, Wis., then to Menominee, returning to Escanaba on the fifth day. This race was sailed by several Escanaba boats, one from Gladstone, one boat from Menominee and one small sloop from Ephraim.

Course Reversed

In 1939 the course was reversed, the first run being to Menominee so that the fleet could participate in the M&M 100-mile race. At the starting line, jockeying back and forth in a stiff north wind, were some of the finest yachts on the lakes; stately Q-class and 8-metre racers from Chicago and Milwaukee rubbing elbows with the sloops and schooners and ketches from Escanaba, Marinette and Ephraim. On this downhill run the Q-class Stephia of Milwaukee hung up a record time for this leg, averaging better than 10 m.p.h.

After the M&M 100-mile race, the entire fleet raced across Green Bay to Ephraim, where they sailed the Ephraim Annual Regatta before leaving on the last leg of the race back to Escanaba. The Cruising Race for that year was won on points by the Jibuje II owned by Dr. C. H. Boren of Marinette, with John Mitchell's 6-metre sloop Oslo of Escanaba taking second place and the Yankee of Marinette third, the Chicago and Milwaukee boats eliminating themselves from the competition by electing to continue on south instead of sailing the third run.

Fish Creek Included

With the Yachting Bulletin of Chicago proclaiming the Escanaba Cruising Race a contest second in importance only to the historic Mackinac classic and the Great Lakes Cruising club recommending it to their members as a thoroughly attractive series, the cruising race committee and local yachtsmen and esthusiasts look forward to seeing a fine fleet of racing yachts assembled at Escanaba for the start on the morning of July 30. Such "gold-platers" of the Great Lakes as the 10-metre Revenge, the 8-metre Warrior and Greenspot, the cruisers Copperhead and Fairwind and Cormorant, and many others have expressed their intention of sailing the race.

This year, by popular request, the committee has included Fish Creek, Wis., as the first port of call, remaining there the second day to sail the Fish Creek Midsummer Regatta, then sailing to Menominee, then back across Green Bay to Ephraim,. where the fleet will sail the Ephraim Annual Regatta before returning on the fourth run back to Escanaba.

A major attraction at Ephraim this year will be the finals in the Green Bay Seagull series for the championship of Green Bay waters. Francis Boyce, winner of the Gull-class eliminations at Escanaba will represent the Escanaba club, sailing against the winning skippers from the other five Gull fleets. A considerable number of Escanaba enthusiasts plan on motoring to Ephraim on July 3rd to see Boyce make a stab at the Vail cup and the Henes trophy for this series, as well as bringing the Gull finals to Escanaba in 1941 if his skill and racing strategy works as well at Ephraim as it did at Escanaba in the elimination contests.

Schedule Given

As the objects of this cruising race are to encourage the designing, building and sailing of small cruising yachts, and to develop in the amateur sailor a love of seamanship and proficiency in navigation, the committee has specified that yachts entering must be thoroughly seaworthy type, strongly built and rigged and with enclosed cabins. The committee reserves the right to reject any entry that is, in their opinion, not suited to this race either in type, condition or personnel.

The race will be under the supervision of the race committee of the Green Bay Yacht Racing committee and the Cruising Race committee of the Escanaba Yacht club.

The following is the complete program:

Tuesday, July 30—First run, Escanaba to Fish Creek, Wis. Starting gun at 9 a. m. EST.

Wednesday, July 31 — Fish Creek Midsummer Regatta. Sailing races for all classes morning and afternoon. Picnic dinner, auto cruises and other shore activities.

Thursday, August 1—Second Run Fish Creek, Wis., to Menominee, Mich. Starting gun 12 noon EST. At Menominee, the fleet will be the guests of the Menominee and Marinette Yacht club at their annual party for presentation of trophies. Impromptu race in the evening.

Friday, August 2—Third run, Menominee, Mich., to Ephriam, Wis. Starting gun 10 a. m. EST.

Saturday, August 3 — At Ephriam. Ephriam Yacht club Annual Regatta, morning and afternoon, all classes. Sea Gull class finals for the Green Bay championship with skipper and crew from each Green Bay club rotating Ephriam Gulls, for Vail trophy and Henes trophy. Skippers dinner and reception. Auto tours for leisure time.

Sunday, August 4—Fourth run, Ephriam to Escanaba, Mich. Starting gun 9 a. m. EST.

Aside from the sail yachts which will enter the race, a special invitation has been sent to power boat owners to participate in all shore events and to join the cruise.

The racing fleet will be accompanied by the power cruisers who find these cruising runs and shore activities very much to their likinß. Commodore DeWitt's cruiser Valiant II and Commodore Hornstein's Roamer will act as committee boats, with Coast Guard cutters patrolling the course at all times.

Yacht Club Started By Few Six Years Ago

Six years ago eight men with vision and a mind for civic advancement, organized the Escanaba Yacht Club. At that time there were only three pleasure boats in service and the only anchorage was just south of the Reiss Coal Dock on the north shore. To reach this location it was necessary to drive through the Northwestern yards and walk through ankle deep sand mixed with soot and cinders. The boats, sails and ropes were always black with coal dust, but these men knew they were making a start and were willing to put up with all of the inconvenience knowing that some day things would be different.

From this meager start, the local fleet has grown to more than fifty pleasure boats and one of the most beautiful and safest yacht harbors on the Great Lakes with more than twelve hundred feet of dockage, marine railway, row boat ramp, boat wells and other facilities, is now almost completed on the south shore.

Many Great Lakes yachtsmen wanted to visit Escanaba, but had been advised to stay away because of lack of facilities. As soon as the local harbor was sufficiently improved, the Escanaba Yach Club began contacting all yachtsmen and invited them to visit Escanaba. In order that the local club might become better acquainted with outside yachtsmen, they became members of the Lake Michigan Yachting Association which put the local club definitely on the map as a yachting center. The result of all of these efforts is that visitors now come to Escanaba in large numbers every year and are not content to to sail into the harbor and out again, but some have remained here for a week at a time. More than sixty yachts visited the Escanaba Yacht Harbor during the 1939 season bringing approximately four hundred people, which in itself is quite a convention.

U. P. ROAD PROJECTS

Editor
Escanaba Daily Press
Escanaba, Michigan

My attention has been directed to two editorials, "Living Snow Fences" and "$6,000,000,000 Industry," in your issue of July 12 in which you comment favorably on the work of the State Highway Department in the Upper Peninsula. I want to thank you for your interest in our efforts to make Michigan highways an economic asset to the people of the state.

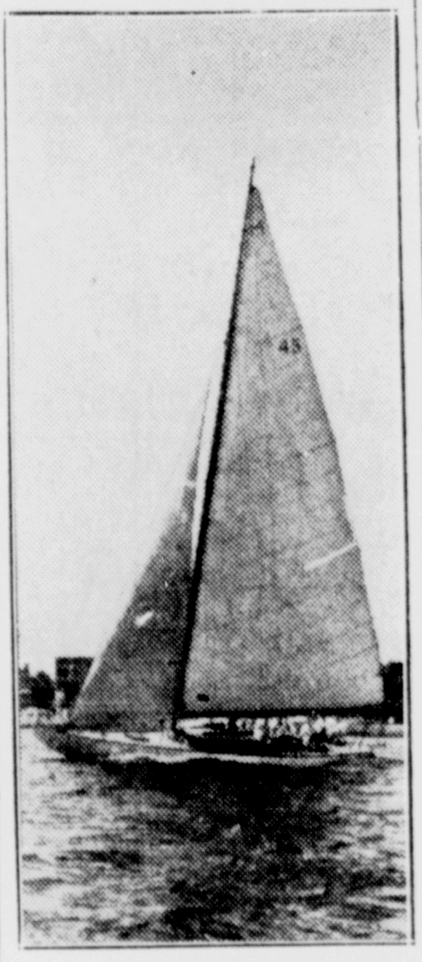
Roadside tree planting and the purchase of 400-foot strips of right-of-way through wooded sections to preserve the natural snow barriers has been carried out as extensively as our funds for this type of improvement would permit. Roadside landscape development, the roadside table and park are all a part of this program.

There is an increasing public interest in this work. We have found that many communities, such as the Home Extension group at Wilson, want to beautify public highway right-of-way. These groups receive our active cooperation. Public participation in such work is insurance against neglect or destruction of roadside beauty.

Your interest in this work in the Upper Peninsula is sincerely appreciated.

Very truly yours,
Murray D. VanWagoner,
State Highway Commissioner.

In Cruising Race



One of the favorites in the annual cruising race to be held July 30, will be Dr. H. C. Boren's Ji-Bu-Je of Marinette, pictured above. Ji-Bu-Je won the event last year.

Old Building Is Being Torn Down

The building at 1207 Ludington street, owned by the Delft Theatre Corporation, and last occupied by the Electric Studio, is being torn down.

This building was erected in the early 80's by John Corcoran, who ran a general store there. Later, Mr. Corcoran was associated with John K. Stack in the banking business.

Insurance Agents To Hold Meeting In Escanaba Monday

The Citizens' Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. of Howell, will hold its annual Upper Peninsula agency meeting Monday, July 22, at the Delta Hotel. There will be a business session at 3:00 p. m. at which will be presented several new features which the company is inaugurating in the automobile insurance field, and a banquet at 7:00 p. m. in the main dining room of the hotel.

Supreme Court Justice George Bushnell of Lansing will be the speaker for the evening. An attendance of 100 or more is expected which will include agents of the company and leading attorneys from all parts of the U. P.

The Citizens' Mutual Auto Insurance company, which is the oldest automobile insurance company in Michigan, is this year celebrating its silver anniversary, having been organized in 1915. Executives of the company from Howell who will attend the meeting will include: Wm. E. Robb, secretary - manager; Berthold Woodhams, claims supervisor; Joseph V. Brady, agency supervisor; W. R. Ladner, auditor; Leo C. Allen, special agent. Emmett J. Noon of Escanaba is the U. P. manager for the company.

Building Improvements

SMALL HOMES • STORES • APARTMENTS • MODERNIZATION

• by PAUL T. HAAGEN, A.I.A. •

THE SQUARE HOUSE

A square house is the most economical to build, for the following reasons: First, it is compact; second, it takes less roof and less excavation and less foundation walls than a picturesque, rambling type of house that covers the entire lot. It also is an easier house to heat, consuming less fuel.

TERMITES

One of the indications of the presence of termites in a building is the emigration of the termites from the building in the spring and fall. These will be winged insects. Another sign is the discovery of the branching shelter tubes on the foundation wall, reaching up from the ground to the woodwork over the surface of brick, stone or concrete. Damage to a building will usually be indicated by the sagging of the basement floor or studding.

According to the United States Public Service, the average expectancy of life has increased since 1880 from 40 to 60 years. Many factors have contributed to this phenomenal advance. One of the most important is the better protection to health provided by safe supplies of water. While plumbing properly installed is a protection to health, incorrectly installed plumbing may permit the pollution of water within a building and thus endanger health.

PRIMING COAT

The priming coat of paint should be quite thin and contain a high percentage of oil. The main purpose of this first coat is to soak well into the wood—which cannot be achieved by the use of thick paint. The second coat should be a little thicker than the first.

PUTTY

Don't overlook the fact that nail holes must be puttied up before the woodwork is painted. The putty should be applied on top of the priming coat, as putty sticks only to painted surfaces and will not adhere to unpainted wood.

MODERN LIGHTING

In the newer homes charming lighting effects may be installed by use of indirect lighting at the junction of the ceiling and the walls. This will provide a soft, light for the entire room with no concentration in any point and hence no shadows.

The light is thrown up on to the ceiling and reflected down into the room.

IMPROVED GAS RANGES

The newer gas ranges are made with lustrious, stainproof top grate that makes for a neat looking, clean and shining stove which does not become dingy as it may be easily wiped off if something is spilled or boils over, and kept polished and sparkling.

REFRIGERATOR NEEDS SPACE ABOVE

If a kitchen cabinet is to be installed over a mechanical refrigerator, it must be hung so that there is at least six inches of space between the top of the refrigerator and the bottom of the cabinet. This is to allow the heated air from the refrigerator to escape.

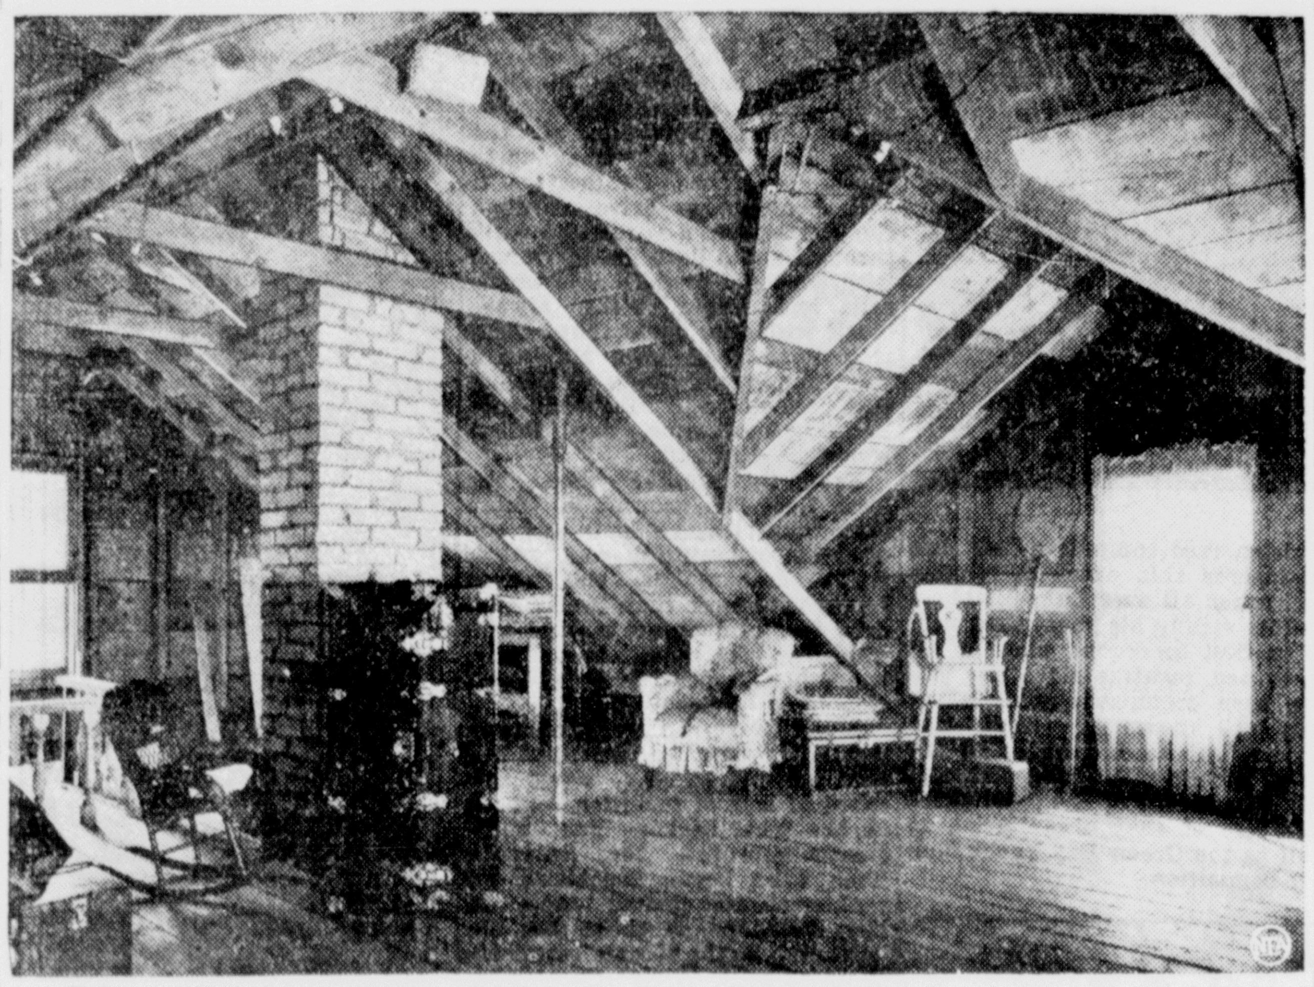
NEW SINK HAS HANDY LEDGE

A new kitchen sink has a back ledge built right into the sink of the same enameled material as the sink. This sink also has a chromium plated metal drainboard and a rubber hose with a spray for washing dishes.

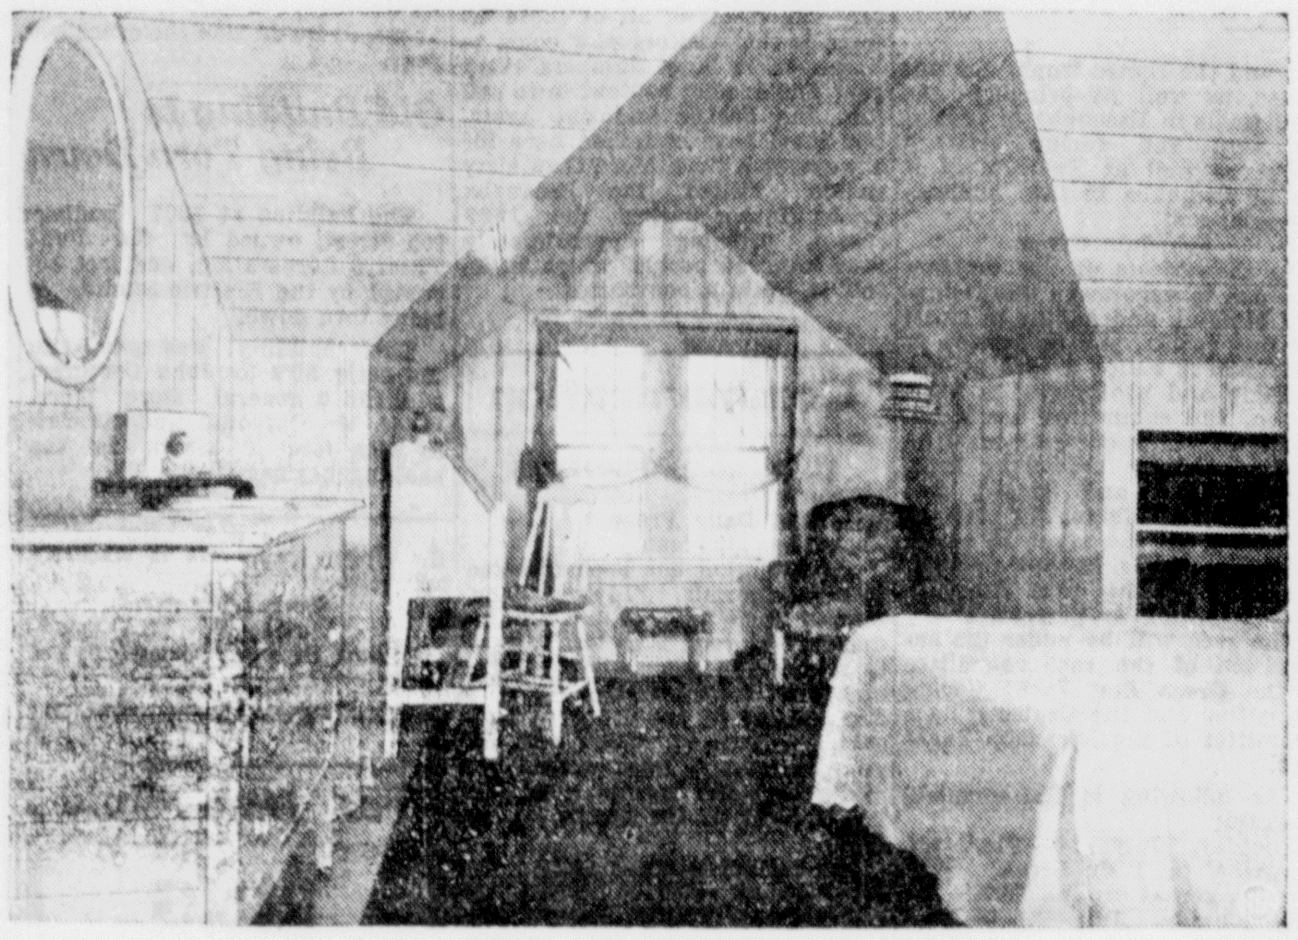
You can easily doctor up canned baked beans by adding a little chopped green peppers browned in bacon fat. Open the can, add the pepper and cook slowly for five minutes. Pour into a buttered casserole, cover with tomatoes and bafle 20 minutes in a moderate oven. This makes a grand picnic dish, too. It can be reheated over the camp fire.

Here is a new tidbit for your next tea or cocktail party: Spread rolled out rich biscuit dough with chopped cooked ham blended with a little chopped olives, sweet pickles and onions, and moistened slightly with catsup. Form into a 1½ inch roll. Cut off ½ inch slices and bake, flat sides up, on a greased pan for 5 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve warm. If desired the rolls can be already for the baking and stored in the refrigerator until time needed.

Presto Chango! And Your House Has An Extra Room



Before—it was just an attic, a catch-all for this and that—a large room, but a not very useful one. When they were little, the children sometimes played there on rainy afternoons. As the youngsters grew up an additional bedroom became a necessity.



After—So the bare, unfinished attic was made into this attractive, light, airy one. The walls were covered with sound-proof insulating board and painted a soft shade of yellow. Painted furniture, a double bed, built-in book-shelves, sheer, criss-cross curtains and chintz chairs complete the transformation.

The Fireplace

The fireplace has been no mere home-building detail,—not just a place for the fire and the comfort which it provides on a chill evening. Rather it has helped make history! It has brought romance into architecture, just as the casement window did centuries ago, and as the garden gate did later.

DOWN SPOUTS

Down spouts may be made of copper, zinc, sheet lead or galvanized iron. Copper and galvanized iron are used most frequently in the United States. Both these materials should be corrugated (having a wrinkled surface) to permit ice which may form inside to expand with consequent expansion of the metal without injury. Square down spouts are also preferable to round ones, although many of the latter shape are found on dwellings. The style of the house determines the shape of the down spouts.

Minced tongue combines deliciously with cooked diced chicken, diced celery and mayonnaise for sandwich filling. It also makes a tasty stuffing for small, scooped out tomatoes or hard-cooked eggs.

OLD HOMES

Owners of old homes with large unused porches and with other features common to houses built some years ago can easily have alterations made that will make their homes thoroughly modern and attractive in appearance. There is hardly any limit to the improvements that may be made. It may be that an old house needs to beautify and modernize its appearance with a new, attractive roof which can be put right on over the old roof, or a coat of paint and a few modifications of the lines and architectural features such as the dormers, porch columns, the front door, etc.

Before storing winter clothes, give them a thorough brushing and airing. Turn over on the wrong sides and brush the seams open. Often dust remains there which might attract moths. Of course all spots must be removed.

Much Building Work Launched In Escanaba

Three new business structures on Ludington street and more than a dozen new homes in various parts of the city are under construction indicating a peak of activity in the building trades here that has not been equalled in the past decade.

Construction of a new gas station at the corner of Ludington and sixth streets is well under way and the contractor expects to complete the structure in the near future.

At 1212 Ludington a 120 x 25 foot, single story building of brick and cinder blocks is nearing completion and will be occupied about the first of August by a local furniture dealer.

Ready for occupancy also about August 1 will be a 40 x 50 foot structure of concrete blocks at 1632 Ludington. The building will be owned and occupied by a local automobile dealer.

Local home builders are showing a decided preference for pure Colonial and modifications of Colonial styles in architecture in the homes under construction now.

Finishing touches are being put on a six room Colonial style home at 625 Ogden Avenue, the property of Mr. and Mrs. John Luecke.

Work on a modern American Colonial home at the corner of ninth avenue south and twelfth street which will be owned by Mr. and Mrs. Luther Krantz is well under way and the contractor expects to complete it about the end of September.

Construction of a cottage next to the Krantz home on ninth avenue for John Edick has also begun.

At tenth avenue and eleventh street another Colonial home of six rooms is nearing completion. The house is the property of Kelly Johnson.

A five room cottage for P. H. Connolly located at twelfth street and eleventh avenue will be completed about the end of September.

Construction of a cottage for Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Carroll at 306 south seventh street has begun. A single story, seven room home for Grover Lewis at the corner of sixth street and second avenue south will be completed in approximately three months.

Rapid progress in the construction of Dr. Harold Groos' new Monterey Colonial style home at 421 Ogden avenue is being made and it is likely that it will be completed by the end of October.

A new home on the corner of eleventh street and sixth avenue will be the property of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Desilets.

WATER SOFTENING

There is a tried and proven system of softening the water used throughout your house so you may have clear, iron-free and suds-producing water from any faucet instantly. This is such a luxury and comfort that it is worth considering for these benefits alone, and in addition, it soon saves its cost of installation in the lesser quantity of soap used, the lesser wear and tear on linens washed in the softened water, the saving in plumbing repairs, and the increased efficiency and speed with dishes, laundry and cleaning of all kinds about the house may be accomplished. Why not look into this simple appliance today and give your family a real treat?

Let cornmeal mush or hominy slices, browned, replace potatoes with fried chicken and gravy the next time that you serve it. Mold the hominy or mush in a loaf pan rinsed out in cold water. Remove, slice thin and brown well in fat.

SERVICE PIPES

The size of the service pipe is governed by the number and size of faucets, length of pipe and pressure of water. It may vary from ¾ to 1½ inch. There should be a main shut-off valve inside the cellar wall to control the entire water supply. There should also be a shut-off valve at the base of each vertical riser and at each fixture.

OVEN LIGHTING

In the new electric ranges for your kitchen, you will find a very convenient and welcome new improvement,—a light which automatically goes on when the oven door is opened. It is so placed that the oven is lighted in all corners, and is covered with smooth glass flush with the back wall so it may be easily wiped off and kept clean.

RISE PREDICTED IN AUTO PRICES

Trade-In Value Is Not Expected to Increase However

BY DAVID J. WILKIE
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, July 20.—If you think that because 1941 model automobiles are likely to be higher in price the trade-in value of your last year's model will go up correspondingly you're in for disillusionment, for the sales division of the industry has plenty of second hand cars, and price increases don't work that way.

A better way to appraise the outlook for both new and used units, say authoritative sources, is to expect the individual buyer to have to pay more for the used vehicle as well as the factory delivered car after the 1940 model output is completed.

This analysis of prospects for at least the early months of the 1941 season is based on the assumption in trade circles as well as among neutral observers that the automobile manufacturers, engaged in the most competitive business in the world, will increase list prices only to the extent necessary to cover added production costs.

There is nothing especially altruistic about this attitude on the part of the motorcar manufacturer. His experience generally over the last decade has been that price increases retard new car demand. At the same time the car maker has learned that if increases are to be made the time likely to occasion the least disturbance to an upward buying movement is at the end of the one season or the beginning of a new one.

Whatever sales resistance might develop from announcement of a boost in prices usually dissolves before the initial inspection of the new models, always improved in "eye appeal" for just that purpose. The sales division also has opportunity at the beginning of the season to stress certain engineering advancements as justification for higher prices.

Difficult to explain, on the other hand, are price advances in mid-season. Almost invariably such boosts lose the objective in the curtailment of buyer demand. The industry had such an experience a few years ago when the decline in sales was so sharp the increase was called off within a fortnight after it was promulgated.

Thus, while a price increase is just about inevitable with the presentation of new models, it will not be any greater than the car manufacturers consider absolutely necessary. On the basis of present indications they know that they can count upon a fairly heavy demand and they may rely upon small unit profit again during the coming year to make operations profitable without involving major price boosts.

Used car stocks continue heavy but the merchandisers are not worrying a great deal at this time. They figure that regardless of the new car situation as to price schedules, an expanding demand for used cars will develop with the increased employment expected to result from the stepping up of factory activity that will result from war munitions output and the effort at the same time to continue normal manufacturing processes.

Official sales reports and the field surveys of the various manufacturers indicate that the heavy inventory of new car stocks that occasioned so much concern a month or more ago are rapidly dwindling under sustained buyer demand. By the time the 1941 model season is in full swing there will be mighty few of the current models unsold. Certainly there will be no "bargain" sales from present indications.

Rowe to Return to Nahma School

Prof. Kenneth Thorpe Rowe, member of the English department of the University of Michigan, will return to Nahma to conduct a course in playwriting at the vacation school, August 11 to 24, under the sponsorship of the university extension department.

Prof. Rowe has been instructor in playwriting and drama at the university for the last 12 years. Plays by his students have received nationwide production on professional and amateur stages and on the air. In the past three years eleven national play-writing awards have been won by his students. Professor Rowe has edited three books of University of Michigan plays, is a contributor on his field of the drama to various periodicals, and is the author of the recent book, Write That Play. He is a member of the Advisory Council of the Bureau of New Plays, of the Collegiate Advisory Committee of the Federal Theatre, and an educational adviser for NBC drama programs.

Professor Rowe's undergraduate work was at Rice Institute, Houston, Texas, and his graduate study at Harvard. He taught at Rice Institute and the University of Oregon before coming to Michigan. He has been active in community and educational theatre organization. On one occasion, as a member of three theatres, he was acting in one show, directing another, and stage manager for a third at the same time.

Professor Rowe has studied the European as well as the American theatre. When in England he has divided his time between the non-dramatic interest of research on sixteenth-century manuscripts and associations with the theatre, drama broadcasting, and motion-picture production. At odd times, he has also been boss of gangs of Mexicans on the Border, a seaman on freighters, mackerel fisherman, and forest ranger.

Mrs. William Boller of Oak Park, Illinois, who is General Chairman of the show has as her committee, Mrs. James Vaudreuil, Mrs. Frank Vaudreuil, Mrs. Edward Bennett, Mrs. Ora Endress, Mrs. Ray Meldrum, Mary Hill and Cecille Carter.

The Grand Marais Woman's Club invites and urges all residents of Grand Marais to exhibit and extends a cordial invitation to the general public to attend.

PLANT TREES IN ESCANABA AREA

CCC Workers Reforest Michigan Game and Forest Lands

The Escanaba river game area, is one of the tracts included for the first half of this year in the planting of five and a half million seedling trees by CCC workers on Michigan forest and game lands.

Three-quarters of a million of the trees are hardwoods, planted principally for wildlife food and cover. In addition to the Escanaba tract, hardwood plantings were made in the Cusino and Crawford game area.

Pine plantings made this year by CCC labor include the setting out of 700,700 seedlings on Mackinac state forest, 155,400 on Hardwood state forest, 493,600 on Black lake state forest, 798,700 on Houghton state forest, 160,000 on Higgins lake state forest, and 985,175 on Lake Superior state forest.

Two demonstration areas near Petoskey were planted with 8,000 pines, two near Vanderbilt with 9,500 and two near Kalkaska with 11,500 for public education in reforestation.

Since CCC crews began work on state forest and game areas they have planted approximately 82,000,000 white, Norway and jack pines, and 3,500,000 hardwoods.

Lampreys Found In Upper Great Lakes

St. Ignace—A new "farthest north" for the sea lamprey, a newcomer to the upper Great Lakes by way of the Welland canal, is recorded with identification of two specimens of this fish parasite taken by George Frisbie of the U. S. forest service from the Pine river near here.

Identification was made at the conservation department's institute for fisheries research at Ann Arbor. This is the first find of sea lampreys in the upper peninsula, the farthest north reached last season being in rivers at the tip of the southern peninsula.

Specimens taken were a male and a female, each 18 inches long. Because of the lateness of the season, lamprey spawning runs are still in progress. Sport fishermen have been asked to report any spawning runs observed. Commercial fishermen destroy the eel-like creatures found clinging to fish taken in nets.

A free-swimming mud dweller when young, the lamprey becomes parasitic at maturity, and fastening itself with its strong sucking mouth to larger fish, it feeds on the blood of its victims. Lamprey scars decrease the value of commercial fish. Where they are abundant, lampreys do extensive damage to fish populations.

First observed in Lake Erie in 1921, the sea lamprey has extended its range farther through the upper lakes each season. It is distinguished from the native lamprey by its greater size, divided dorsal fin and mottled coloration.

In eastern states, lampreys are commercially important as a food fish. A primitive among fishes, the lamprey has no bones, the entire skeleton being cartilage.

Mountains are only thick portions of the earth's crust, floating on the more dense interior, like "corks in cold molasses," according to many geologists.

Old Orchard Farm

Harvesting Time Is Approaching

With the barley beginning to show a suggestion of golden brown and with the oat fields "heading out," tangible evidence is accumulating that harvest time isn't far away, out at Old Orchard farm, the Daily Press experimental farm, at Flat Rock.

The farm's crop of barley and a part of the oats are being grown over on the Tom Jones place and in spite of late sowing both crops have shown a most satisfactory growth, under the unusual weather conditions that have prevailed this season. The barley will have to be harvested in two sections, as a portion of that field is low and the first sowing of barley did not come up satisfactorily in that section, so it had to be resowed.

The second sowing is just beginning to show a few heads, so its harvest will be just a little later. The oats field at the Jones place was badly infested with mustard, but that nuisance was finally eliminated and a fair crop of oats over there is in prospect. At the home place the eight acre field of oats has shown a tremendous growth and the only thing now feared is that if a heavy rain or wind storm should develop, after the heads are well filled, the whole field may lodge badly, making harvesting difficult. Alsace clover, sowed in the oats both at home and over on the Jones place, made a fine catch and in both fields, the young plants are nearly half as high as the mother crop. So a big hay crop for next season's cutting now seems to be assured.

The farm crew was kept busy all of last week in giving the potatoes another spraying of poison and Bordeaux mixture, in cultivating the corn and other routine work about the farm. The corn crop, while well behind normal growth for this time of the season, is doing about as well as can be expected. It is getting pretty high for two horse cultivation, but unless hot sunshine and warm nights develop within the next week, it will be possible to give the crop another going over, before the one-horse cutivators are brought into use.

Electric Fence Erected

An electric fence was put up last week, to provide pasture for the pigs and cows in the field from which alsace clover hay was cut a week ago and in the wooded corner, down near Julia Duranceau's store. The fence is intended to protect the oats, growing alongside the clover field and the potatoes, adjoining the wooded pasture. The wooded corner has not been pastured since early spring and has a heavy crop of grass, in addition to offering shade for the cows during the heat of the day, when the pest of flies is the worst.

In order to make the livestock respect the two simple looking strands of wire and recognize it as a barrier from which they must maintain a safe distance, it is necessary to educate them every year. As soon as the fences were connected up with the special transformer, in the tool house, on Wednesday, the education of the sows and pigs was started. Ears of corn were tied to a low wire, strung along the lane and the sows and pigs were then driven into the lane. There was a wild rush of both mothers and young porkers for the luscious looking ears of corn, but when they reached the wire there was a big surprise awaiting them. When they tried to reach the corn they touched the charged wire, which gives off an intermittent mild electric shock. There were a lot of squeals of surprise at the beginning of the lesson, but the mothers quickly recognized the wire from their experience of last season, while the pigs tried again and again to grab the corn, but each time they were met with a sharp, stinging prick. Finally both mothers and their babes withdrew, to stand in a confused row, a safe distance from the wire, as their pig minds tried to figure out the phenomenon. The mothers had enough with one effort, but occasionally one of the pigs, showing off before his brothers and sisters, would make a dash for the wire and retire in squealing confusion. After remaining in the section of the lane, where the wire was strung, for nearly an hour, the entire drove finally made its way down the lane to their usual feeding grounds and no pig could even be driven to that section of the lane again. Their first lesson was complete and after allowing the charged wire to give its warning to anything that ventures near it, for a week, the stock will be turned in the new pastures. All of the cows on the farm were trained to respect an electric fence last season, so their memory will have to be but slightly refreshed to allow the two innocent looking wires hold them within bounds, for the rest of the summer.

Caretaker's House Painted

The work of finishing the job of painting the caretaker's house and adding a small porch roof to the front, was finally completed last week. The next job down there will be to haul in a quantity of sand, to fill in the yard about the foundation, before the top soil can be moved into place, to provide a lawn about the place and finally give it the finished appearance of a place where real folks live.

Ring, the farm dog, is going to know a lot of tricks before the summer is ended, if the efforts of Carroll and Helen Harrison are successful. He is being taught to "play dead", shake hands and to stand on his rear legs and do a little dance with one of the girls. Ring takes all this fussing in good nature, but he would much rather just chase a ball or a stick and continue his dignified job of just protecting two little city girls, who didn't know much about a farm when they arrived, but whose farm education is now becoming quite complete.

DEATH CLAIMS W. S. KING, 76

Body of Green Bay Man Will Be Brought Here for Burial

W. S. King, 76, of Green Bay, retired railroad executive, who was prominently known both in his home community and in Escanaba, died at 4:30 o'clock Friday morning at St. Vincent hospital in Green Bay. Pneumonia, from which he had been seriously ill for the past ten days, caused his death.

Mr. King, who was connected with the Stack family in Escanaba, through his marriage to the late Mrs. Margaret Atkinson, a sister of the late Mrs. John K. Stack, sr., was born in Milford Center, Ohio, November 22, 1863. He moved with his family at the age of ten to Marysville, Ohio, where he learned telegraphy and took a position as telegrapher with the C. C. C. I. railroad.

After being promoted to train dispatcher, he went in that capacity, with the Chesapeake and Ohio road in 1888. He was transferred to Huntington, W. Va., in 1890, and two years later went to New Orleans as superintendent of the L. N. O. and T. road. He was successively district superintendent at Vicksburg and Jackson, Miss., and at Carbondale, Ill., and in 1904 he became general superintendent of the Y. and M. V. road at Memphis. He retired in 1910 and moved to Green Bay in that year.

He was active in the founding of the Escanaba Paper company, disposing of his interests in 1912.

Fraternally he was a Fourth Degree Knight of Columbus and he took a prominent part in the establishment of the Columbus Community club at Green Bay, serving on its board of directors for several years and at one time as president of the board.

His marriage to Mrs. Atkinson, who died five years ago, took place in Green Bay in 1905.

His only survivor is a brother, Eugene, of Huntington, W. Va., who has been in Green Bay since his brother's serious illness.

The body was taken to the Schauer and Schumacher funeral home where it is remaining until the funeral hour. Services will be held Monday morning at 9 o'clock, CST, at St. John's Cathedral, Green Bay, and the funeral cars will leave immediately after the service for Escanaba. Burial rites will be held here at 1:15 o'clock, EST, Monday afternoon, at the Stack family plot in St. Joseph's cemetery where interment will be made.

Every living thing is at least 60 per cent water.

BY FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, July 20 (AP)—The stock market muddled through another lackadaisical session today and finished the week with an irregularly lower trend.

Price changes, however, were inconsequential for the most part and were rendered more or less meaningless by the fact that the turnover was the smallest for any Saturday in more than two years.

Brokers again attributed apathy mainly to the desire of speculative forces to keep fairly well in the clear pending further European war developments, particularly a possible attempt of Hitler to make good his latest threat to destroy England if the British refuse to make peace.

The business outlook remained as a moderate market prop, although there was talk here and there of a nearby let-down as a prelude to the broadening of defense spending.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .1 of a point, but on the week showed a net advance of .2. Transfers of 111,220 shares compared with 124,030 last Saturday, touching a low mark for a two-hour stretch since June 18, 1938. Owing to two fairly lively days, the week's aggregate of 1,634,720 shares bettered that of the preceding week by around 100,000 shares.

Among stocks under water at the close were Bethlehem Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Pennsylvania and Loft.

Emerging with modest improvement were U. S. Steel, Woolworth, Du Pont, Kennecott, North American, Chesapeake & Ohio, Standard Oil of N. J., and General Electric.

Bonds and commodities emulated stocks. Wheat at Chicago was off ½ to 1 1-8 cents a bushel and corn down ¼ to ¾. Cotton lost 5 to 25 cents a bale.

Lower by fractions in the curb were Cities Service, Glen Alden Coal, Phoenix Securities and Niagara Hudson Power. Dealings here amounted to approximately 23,000 shares against 34,000 a week ago.

Stocks edged forward Monday, with volume hitting a bottom for any full session since 1918. The list had its best day Tuesday, with leaders snapping back 1 to 2 points. The recovery was attributed largely to the belief the market had been "sold out". The averages held about even Wednesday and Thursday, but slipped Friday.

CHICAGO PRICES

CHICAGO BUTTER

Chicago, July 20 (AP)—Butter prices were unchanged today.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, July 20 (AP)—Wheat lost a cent and other grains followed with fractional declines today in a market dominated by quiet selling based on reports of scattered rains over the grain belt.

Although the heat wave lingered, causing experts to fear for crops in some areas missed by recent rains, the general feeling was that conditions can be maintained in most regions if showery weather continues. This, in effect, was promised by the forecast which suggested cooler weather in parts of the northwest and west with some showers in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Nebraska and Iowa.

Hedging pressure, though light, and some selling of July contracts also depressed wheat. Prices finished at or near the lows of the day, ½ to 1 1-8 cents lower than yesterday, July 73 1-8, September 74 1-8 to 74. The July price was ½ cent above the season's low.

Corn closed ¼ to 3-4 down, July 62 3-4, September 60 to 59 7-8; oats unchanged to 3-4 off; rye 5-8 to 3-4 down and lard 2 to 5 lower.

No. 1 hard wheat sold up to 76, No. 1 yellow corn up to 65 3-4 and No. 1 white oats at 33¾. Spot wheat prices, however, were 1 to 1½ cents lower while oats dropped 3-4 to 2 cents.

December corn, which advanced 2 cents yesterday, was weakest today, showing loss of a cent at times.

Liquidation of July oats weakened that grain while rye followed wheat.

Lard trade was very quiet but the market was steadied by government forecast that domestic per capita consumption this year will be the largest on record.

CHICAGO LIVESTOCK

Chicago, July 20 (AP)—Hogs, quotable top around 6.85; shippers took none; holdover 500; compared with week ago: Good and choice barrows, gilts and packing sows steady to 10 lower.

Salable cattle 100; no calves; compared with Friday last week: Strictly good and choice light yearlings fully steady; comparable long yearlings and medium weight steers weak to 25 lower; heavy steers 25 to 50 down, kinds scaling over 1,400 lbs. showing omst downturn; numerous loads 10.25 to 11.25; all grassy and shortfed steers unevenly 25 to 50 off, gsass heifers showing similar decline; fed heifers steady, fairly active; heavy bulls weak, with light and medium weights 25 off; vealers 25 to 50 higher selects up to 11.00; practical top fed steers 11.75; prime Nebraska specialties 12.10; best long yearlings 11.65; light yearlings 11.40; heifers 11.00; more grassy and shortfed steers and heifers in run, hence general killing quality less desirable than last week; canner and cutter cows closed at 3.50 to 5.00; most grassy killing heifers at 6.00 to 7.00; despite decline average price all grade steers for week was 10.45, about 1.25 over year ago.

Salable sheep 2,000; total 3,000; late Friday: Spring lambs fully 25 lower; best sorted natives and westerns 9.00, bulk 8.65 to 9.00; choice western feeders 8.75, god kinds 8.25 to 8.50. Compared with Friday last week: Spring lambs around 1.00 lower, nothing over 9.00 on close, with bulk western springers 8.65 to 9.00, straight or moderately sorted; small lots native springers 9.00; throwout natives mostly 7.00 down; few medium grade fed yearlings 6.50; fat sheep weak, very few native ewes about 3.25, with bulk 2.00 to 3.00; feeding lambs showing moderate price decline, choice kinds late 8.75, others around 8.50.

New York, July 20 (AP)—Traders allowed domestic corporates to follow narrow price routes in slip-shod fashion today.

U. S. treasuries appeared on the ticker tape languidly at declines running to ¼ point.

Rails bore the brunt of pressure in the corporate list. Among losers were Southern Railway 4s at 55, Nickel Plate 4½s at 55½, Missouri Pacific 5s of '77 "F" at 16½, Portland General Electric 4½s at 70¾ and Baltimore & Ohio stamped convertibles at 12¼.

Marked up a notch were Columbia Gas & Electric 5s of '61 at 104½, American Telephone 3¼s of '66 at 108 1-8 and Remington Rand 4¼s at 97.

Turnover of $1,962,000, face value, compared with $1,716,500 a week ago.

SERIAL STORY

FLYING CO-ED

BY MARY KINNAVEY MOORE

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

ANNE NORRIS—wealthy college student, looking for thrills, enrolls in CAA flying course.

GEORGETTE PARKER—Anne's friend. Learning to fly is a serious business with her.

TONY SCOTT—college playboy, son of a gangster, envies Anne's social position.

CAPTAIN DICK DOUGLAS—instructor of the student flying course at Midland University.

* * *

Yesterday: Anne takes her first training flight. Patiently and carefully, Dick explains fundamentals of piloting a ship, dangers to watch, certain precautions that must be observed. Meeting Georgette after the lesson, Anne promises: "I'll be a pilot or bust!"

CHAPTER VI

There was laughter and the sound of gay voices in the softly lighted dining room of one of the city's exclusive clubs. The general air was one of secure and quiet dignity.

But it was not a comfortable atmosphere for Tony Scott, dining with Anne Norris. He reminded himself furiously this was just the type of place he hoped to enter through his marriage with her. He was here now, as her guest, but he didn't like it. He had an uncomfortable feeling that people were staring at him and whispering. He'd show them someday, he promised himself. Someday, when he was Anne's husband.

The lovely red-haired girl across the table from him was also so conscious of the curious glances of the other diners. Throughout the meal, she had been trying to persuade herself that she was not embarrassed by them. A stubborn anger colored her cheeks.

"Tony, I just can't see you again for a while."

"What do you mean—a while?" His voice was steady. After all, he had been expecting something like this.

"Well—until the end of the year. I've—promised."

He lifted an eyebrow. "I see. I'm sorry, Anne. I'd had an idea I was—important to you. I guess I was wrong."

"Of course, you're important to me. Don't you see, Tony? I've promised my uncle—my guardian—I wouldn't see you again until school closes in June. Having dinner with you tonight is the last date until then. I had to see you once more—to explain."

"And—after school closes?"

"Then—" She lifted her hands in a lovely gesture.

He nodded. This was another of those times, he told himself, when seeming to agree would win him success later, later that very evening, in fact. When Anne had suggested they dine at her uncle's club, he had readily assented—because he had his own plans for the remainder of the evening.

"I wouldn't want you to go against your guardian's wishes," he told her. With a sudden smile, he added: "After all, it isn't long until June."

She flashed him a grateful glance. "I'd hoped you'd understand."

"I'll miss you terribly," he said softly. "But I'd wait forever for you."

He looked appreciatively at her, his calculating glance taking in her creamy skin, and the way her coppery curls barely touched her smooth shoulders, admiring the perfection of her pale green chiffon dinner dress. But neither Anne Norris's beauty nor her charm were his only interests in her. He knew plenty of beautiful girls. Too many, in fact. Anne was the means of getting something else that he wanted.

He noticed a couple at a nearby table glancing at him curiously. Again he felt angry and uncomfortable.

"Come on, Anne, let's get out of here!" He started to say "These high-hats think they're the only people on earth," and caught himself just in time. That wasn't the thing to say to Anne. He smiled and continued suavely. "I want you all to myself—on our last date for a long while."

She drew her white evening wrap around her and rose, feeling a sudden relief at going beyond the reach of staring, questioning eyes.

* * *

Rain was beginning to fall as Tony's sleek, fast car drove away from the club.

"Maybe we'd better go straight back to the college," Anne suggested. "It's going to storm."

"Okay. I guess you're right."

They drove a few miles in the direction of the Midland campus, then suddenly the car slowed.

"Anne, let's go by the Post road. There's a fellow out there I want to see about a boat I'm buying—it won't take but a minute."

"All right. It's early, anyway."

They drove out the Post road, talking idly of the boat Tony meant to buy. At last he stopped the car before a low, brilliantly lighted building. Staring out the car window, Anne recognized it as the Villa Aloha, one of the roadhouses forbidden to college students.

"Come on with me, Anne. It's too wet for you to wait in the car."

She shook her head. "I don't want to break school rules, Tony."

"Oh, come on—it isn't as if you were going in to spend the evening. Anyway, no one will recognize you. The manager won't let any college people in."

She hesitated a moment. It was true it was a little different to go in for a moment with Tony, who was there on business. It was, she hoped, just as true that no one would recognize her. And she had always been curious to see inside the place. Still—

"No, Tony—I don't think I'd better."

"Anne—don't be scared. No one will bite you!"

That decided her. She wrapped her cape tightly about her, and ran the few steps through the rain to the door.

* * *

The Villa Aloha was a tawdry place, too bright, too filled with loud voices, heavy smoke and the unmistakable odor of liquor. A three-piece orchestra played swing at one end of the room. The men and women sitting at the tables were as strange to Anne as the guests at her uncle's club had been strange to Tony. She was uncomfortable and a little frightened, and hoped Tony would hurry.

They would have to wait a few minutes, he explained, and, a little reluctantly, she sat down at one of the tables.

"Hi, Tony!"

Anne turned and saw a slender, pretty, blond girl, in a cheap taffeta evening dress standing by the table.

"Hello, Clarice." Tony's cheeks had reddened a little. "Miss Norris—Miss Lane. Clarice runs the dice game here," he added, in explanation. The blond girl barely acknowledged the introduction, devoting her attention to Tony.

"Where have you been, anyway? I thought you were going to call me up last week."

"I was busy," Tony said curtly.

"Never knew you to be that busy before," Clarice said, laughing shrilly. She laid her hand on Tony's arm, familiarly.

A sudden wave of revulsion came over Anne. More than anything in the world, she wanted to get out of the Villa Aloha, away from Tony, back to the security of the college.

"Please Tony—I'd like to go."

"In a minute."

The blond girl stared at her coldly.

Anne had had enough. Suddenly she rose to her feet. "Tony, I'm going, right now. I'll wait for you in the car—"

Her voice died in her throat. Two men, wide shouldered, flashily dressed, edged past their table, hands in coat pockets. As they reached the next table, a short, stout man seated there leaped up in sudden fear, overturning his chair.

Angry voices, guns spitting flame—confusion—somewhere a woman screamed. The musicians stopped in the middle of a phrase.

For an instant, Anne was too paralyzed with fear to move. Then she realized that she must get away, and at once—

"Tony—!"

Tony was gone.

* * *

Her one thought was to get away. Others had had the same idea, and there was a crowd at the door. The police would be here soon, she might be held for questioning. That would mean the end of her college career, she knew.

Frantic and frightened, she looked around the room for a way out.

"Come this way—"

She saw Clarice, a look of sympathy on her face.

"Here—there's a rear door to the manager's office—follow me."

Anne followed the dice-game girl as she led her through a maze of hallways to the office, and unlocked a rear door.

"Beat it while you can. That guy Tony—he would save his own skin, and leave you stuck here—the rat!"

She all but shoved Anne out the door, and slammed it shut.

A police car had stopped at the front entrance of the building. Tony's car was gone. In desperation, Anne ran the other way, across a stretch of bushes and open ground.

Stumbling in the dark, her dress catching on branches and brambles, she ran through the rain. Somehow she must get away. But she had a sudden terrible feeling that she was being pursued.

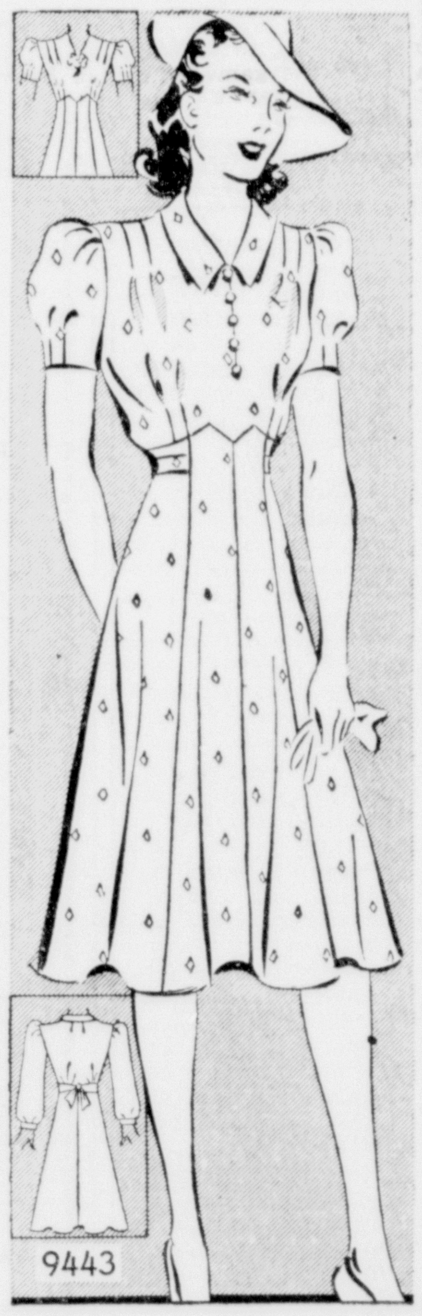
Peaked Waist Is Feature Of Charming Frock

BY MARIAN MARTIN



PATTERN 9443

There's a crisp, clean-cut, ready-for-action air about this frock for roundabout wear. Marian Martin has designed Pattern 9443 with tasteful simplicity and even though you're a needle amateur, her accompanying Sew Chart will steer you quickly through. There's unusual flattery in the skirt-front with its two panels that rise to form a higher peaked waist-seam. You might like the sleeves short or long and full. Make a neat little collar, perhaps in fresh contrast, or use just the attractive curved V neckline alone or with dainty flower trim. A frock you'll find indispensable for months to come!

Pattern 9443 may be ordered only in misses' and women's sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards 39 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins for this MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS, and STYLE NUMBER.

Order the LATEST MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN BOOK of up-to-the-minute styles for mid-summer days . . . each one designed to make you look your prettiest. Clothes for working, playing, traveling, dancing, with accent on coolness. Romantic evening gowns, daytime sheers and cottons, action free sportsters, a lovely bridal gown and sunshine styles for the tiny tots . . . available in patterns that even a beginner can use with success. Wedding Early In August

Dr. Bernice Eversmeyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Eversmeyer, of Muscatine, Iowa, is to be the bride of Dr. Gerald F. Brown, of Madison, Wis., a son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Brown of Wells. The wedding, which will take place at Muscatine, is planned for August 3.

The engagement and approaching marriage of Dr. Bernice Eversmeyer of Muscatine, Iowa, to Dr. Gerald F. Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald F. Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald F. Brown of Wells, was announced by the parents of the bride-elect, Dr. and Mrs. B. E. Eversmeyer, at a recent evening bridge party at their home.

The wedding will take place on August 3 at the First Congregational church in Muscatine.

Dr. Eversmeyer received her B. S. degree from the University of Wisconsin and in 1937 received her M. D. degree from the State University of Iowa. She served her interneship and residency in internal medicine at the Wisconsin General Hospital, Madison, Wis. At present she is a member of the faculty of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, Greensboro, N. C., as associate physician.

Dr. Brown received his B. A. degree from Lawrence College, Appleton, Wis., and his M. D. degree from the University of Chicago. He served his interneship at the Wisconsin general hospital and spent a year of his residency in obstetrics under Dr. DeLee, at the Lying-In Hospital, Chicago. At present he is a member of the hospital staff of Wisconsin general hospital in the department of obstetrics and gynecology.

Shorter Skirts Predicted Style

Hollywood, July 20 (AP)—Skirts are getting shorter and legs are coming back.

That's what happened in the last war and history is repeating itself, says Gilbert Adrian, M-G-M studio's top stylist.

But the consideration is not aesthetic appreciation of a well-turned calf, he adds. It's economy. A scarcity of wool not only will shorten skirts but will eliminate the wastage of pleats, fullness or flares. Dress materials, he believes, will be home-made calico in preference to imports of satin and silk.

Economy doesn't explain his other prediction, for he says the women will be covering their shoulders and arms more as skirts ascend. He looks for high necklines and long sleeves in most of the fall and winter models.

Margaret Kandell, Wilfred Doucette Wedding Saturday

Snapdragons, carnations and roses in pink and white graced the sanctuary of St. Joseph's church Saturday morning for the wedding of Miss Margaret Kandell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kandell of Manistique, and Wilfred Doucette, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Doucette, of 815 North 18th street, this city.

The marriage service was read by Rev. Fr. Edward Leary, O. F. M., who was celebrant of the nuptial high mass at 8:30 o'clock.

St. Joseph's choir, with Miss Alice Cossette, organist-director, sang the music of the wedding mass. Mrs. John Cass was soloist of the mass, and at the offertory, Leonard Moreau sang Millard's "Ave Maria." The traditional processional, "Bridal Chorus," from Wagner's "Lohengrin," and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," the recessional, were played by Miss Cossette.

Dusty Pink With Blue

The bride wore a becoming street length dress of dusty pink with blue accessories and a corsage of lilies. She carried a white prayer book, a gift of her grandmother, used when she received her First Communion. Miss Julia Kandell, sister of the bride, who was her only attendant, wore a street length dress of powder blue with white accessories and a corsage of pink tea roses, and she also carried a white prayer book.

Lyle Utt, a close friend of the bridegdoom, was best man.

Mrs. Kandell, mother of the bride, wore a black and white print with white accessories, and Mrs. Doucette wore navy blue lace with navy and white acessories. Both had shoulder corsages of pink roses.

A wedding breakfast was served to thirty-five guests, immediate members of the two families, at the Chicken Shack, followed by a reception at the Doucette home. Snapdragons, fever few and carnations were arranged with the tiered wedding cake which centered the attractive table appointments.

To Copper Harbor

Mr. Doucette and his bride left for Copper Harbor, where they will spend their honeymoon, the bride, for traveling, wearing a navy blue suit with white accessories. They will make their home, following their return, at 1103 Stephenson avenue.

The bride is employed at the office of Dr. C. M. Cuthbert. Mr. Doucette, who is a graduate of St. Joseph's high school, class of 1932, is with the Escanaba-Gladstone Motorbus company.

Guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kandell and family and Mr. and Mrs. William Rodman, Jr., of Manistique, and Mr. and Mrs. Burke and son, Elmer, of Nahma.

Be Ad-vised

Before You Buy

IF a competent expert could pass on each purchase you make, you would be sure of getting full value for every dollar you spend. But experts are rare, and even then are seldom trained to know more than one type of merchandise. What an imposing retinue of these specialists you would need to pass judgement on your routine purchases of gasoline and gloves, hammocks and hosiery, linen and linoleum

But you can get competent and honest counsel on almost everything you buy without ever meeting an expert. How? By being ad-vised in advance by the advertising pages of this newspaper.

Here you will find all kinds of reputable merchants and manufacturers telling you about their best bargains, and inviting comparisons. In a matter of minutes, you will find more bona fide bargains in print than you would discover on the counters of all the stores you could visit in a six-day shopping trek.

Read these advertising pages regularly for just one week, and then you'll know first-hand that it pays to be ad-vised before you buy. Your money will s-t-r-e-t-c-h further, and your purchases be more satisfactory.

Transport Coordinator Railroaded 41 Years

BY SIGRID ARNE
(AP Feature Service Writer)

Washington — Ralph Budd has been railroading 41 years. He's seen whole towns turn out for their first train. He's the father of the newest railroading idea: the streamlined Zephyr trains.

And now, in the months ahead, he must see that every carrier—trans, but, boat—is co-ordinated smoothly into our defense program. He is transportation coordinator for the defense commission.

At the moment, Budd's problem is to get war-time transportation problems on paper—just in case. So that troops and material can be moved from any point to any point at double-quick. To do that, he acts as liaison between the army and navy and directors of every carrier.

He's finding out what railroads would need in an emergency. The number of freight cars for supply lines on our borders, for anywhere on our borders, for instance. The quickest routes for supplies.

RALPH BUDD
The Quickest Routes for Supplies?

• • •

Budd arranged the most dramatic run a train has ever made: the inauguration of the streamlined train. Budd didn't specially want to make top speed (over 120 miles an hour). He did want to show that a high speed could be kept up for a long distance.

So he announced the Burlington railroad (he's president) would take one of the new streamliners on a non-stop run from Denver to Chicago—1,030 miles. On May 26, 1934. The train was to wind up on a stage in the Chicago Fair grounds.

• • •

The Burlington placed a guard at every single cross-road along the line so nothing could happen to spoil the test. Half a million people turned out along the line that day. The Zephyr pulled out of Denver a little after 5 a. m. and 13 hours and five minutes later slid to a quiet stop on the Chicago stage.

The Zephyr caught on like wild fire.

• • •

Some years ago when Budd was president of the Great Northern railroad, he started a bus subsidiary. Finally started the bus lines that became the nucleus of the Greyhound system. His son, Robert, is president of Greyhound. The other son, John, stuck to trains. He's trainmaster for Great Northern.

Budd was born to a farm family outside Waterloo, Iowa, 61 years ago. Those were the days when there was a great future in railroading. So Budd took engineering at the Highland Park college in Des Moines. Took his first railroad job in 1899.

• • •

By 1906, when the Panama canal was being put through, Budd was one of the bright young men of the rail world. So he was hired to jack up the Panama railroad.

He worked with army engineers in Panama. He was a civil engineer. Those two breeds usually mix like oil and water. But not Budd. He got along just dandy. Maybe that's a hopeful note now that the army will be asking more of the railroads.

In 1913 Budd jumped to big time — with the Great Northern. There he had a chance to prove that it's best to spend money if you can save money by doing it. He built the $25,000,000 Cascade tunnel through the mountains in Washington. It cut the running time to the west coast and cut the hauling cost.

• • •

By 1932 the ticket window became the important sore thumb of the railroad industry. People weren't traveling so much. Many just piled into the family auto.

So Budd wanted a lighter, swifter train that would cost less to run. Then he dropped into the Chicago Fair. There he stood fascinated before a marine Diesel engine that just ran in interminably. It was too heavy for a train. But maybe it could be made of lighter, just as durable materials. Budd popped in on General Motors engineers and coaxed and argued. Final result: the lightweight, railroad Diesel was ready.

• • •

Then like an answer to Budd's prayer, another Budd family (the one that makes Pullman coaches—no relation) came through with the streamlined, stainless steel coach. Budd put them together and got the Zephyr train.

Said Budd when he saw the first one pull out:

"She's like a clean, polished hunting knife."

Tulkki of Negaunee each day this week at the Apostolic Lutheran church in Eben, preparatory to being confirmed Sunday July 21 at 10:30 a. m. Members of the class are: Bernard Lintula, Ero Niemi, Martin Seppanen, Donald Seppanen, Armas Timonen, Carlo Erickson, Vernon Latvala, Vieno Latvala, Bertha Lintula, Bertha Kampinen, Saima Lintula, Helen Kangas, Vivian Aho, Evelyn Latvala, and Sulo Salmi.

Church Supper Wednesday

On Wednesday, July 24, from five until seven thirty p. m. the ladies of the Finnish National Lutheran church in Chatham will serve supper in the church parlors. There will also be an apron and embroidery sale.

Services will be held at 8 p. m. in the church by the Reverend R. V. Niemi of Calumet.

A MIXUP

Muskrats are not rats, and, although they closely resemble beavers, they are allied to meadow mice. Their furs are sold as marsh rabbit, Hudson seal, etc.

WILL OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Clark Celebrate Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Clark, highly respected and well-known Gladstone residents, will observe the 50th anniversary of their wedding today at their home, 807 Michigan avenue.

Open house will be held from 2 to 5 o'clock.

The couple were married July 21, 1890, at the Nashota Mission near Oconomowoc, Wis., and have resided in Gladstone continuously since.

All of the children of the family are here for the celebration. They are Phil S. Clark of Wells, Mrs. G. A. (Louise) Downs, Grand Rapids, Mrs. Don G. (Claire) Miller, Benton Harbor, and George G. Clark, city.

Mr. Clark is Gladstone's oldest citizen. He first came to Gladstone in the 80's and camped with the Davis's and Masons on Saunders Point. He established residence here in 1887 when he was placed in charge of the Davis and Mason mill. The docks were just being started at the time and the Scott building was under construction at Third street.

Mr. Clark served as first treasurer of Minnewasca township before the village of Gladstone was formed. He was also the first treasurer of the city of Gladstone, serving under J. J. Miller, now of Benton Harbor, first mayor of the village and city. Mr. Clark was also the first president of the fire department.

He served 15 consecutive years as a member of the city council, was president pro-tem during that time and a member of the county board of supervisors.

His interest also ran to school affairs and he served 21 years on the board of education, 12 of them as president. He has been on the board of directors of Pinecrest Sanatorium at Powers since it was established and has for a long period of years managed the C. W. Davis Lumber Co., here.

Social

Card Party

PAN FISH GIVE FLYROD SPORT

Wide Range of Baits Can Be Used With Light Tackle Outfits

Good fun and good catches of all kinds of pan-fish are taken on fly rods, and fishermen by the thousands have taken up this sport instead of catching these fish on a cane pole with worm or minnow. Some of the types of pan fish easily taken on fly rods are bluegills, crappies, sunfish, rockbass and perch. Of course, if you want a real test of flyrod skill you can tackle walleyes and pike. For most of us bass and trout are still the "big game" for the light rod. However, even a crappie or bluegill weighing less than a half-pound affords a fight on a light fly rod.

Various forms of artificial lures which includes small spinners and spoons and artificial flies, as well as worms and other live baits, can all be used with a fly rod. The advantage of the fly rod over the bait-casting rod is that light lures, those that are fractional ounces in weight and artificial lures can be cast and handled with a fly rod and are impossible to operate with a bait-casting rod because the lures are too light to bait-cast. The only way they could be used with a casting rod would be to use a sinker to give the necessary casting weight.

Use Landing Net

The ideal pan-fish outfit should consist of a medium weight fly rod of tempered bamboo, around five and one half to five and three-quarters ounces in eight and one-half or nine foot length. With it go a "D" level enameled line with a four foot leader, testing four to six pounds. The reel on a fly rod outfit is least important, being simply a container of line—either a single-action or automatic will serve the purpose.

Be sure to have a light flexible leader in order not to impair the action of the small artificial plugs, bugs, spinners and other lures. A heavy leader is like a piece of wire and does this very thing. A net should always be used to land fish, although in an emergency they can be landed by the gills, or lifted by the mouth. They should never be lifted into the boat by the leader alone as a sudden convulsion of the fish is apt to snap it. In fishing from a boat, care should be used in not putting too great a strain on the rod-tip in netting the fish, through bending the tip at too great an angle. If you have a companion let him do the netting.

One prominent manufacturer of fishing tackle has abandoned the use of cork for bodies of "bugs" and other feathered lures, using a transparent material and hollow structure. This affords a much more serviceable bug, one that will not waterlog nor have the hook pull out, and gives extremely natural colorations.

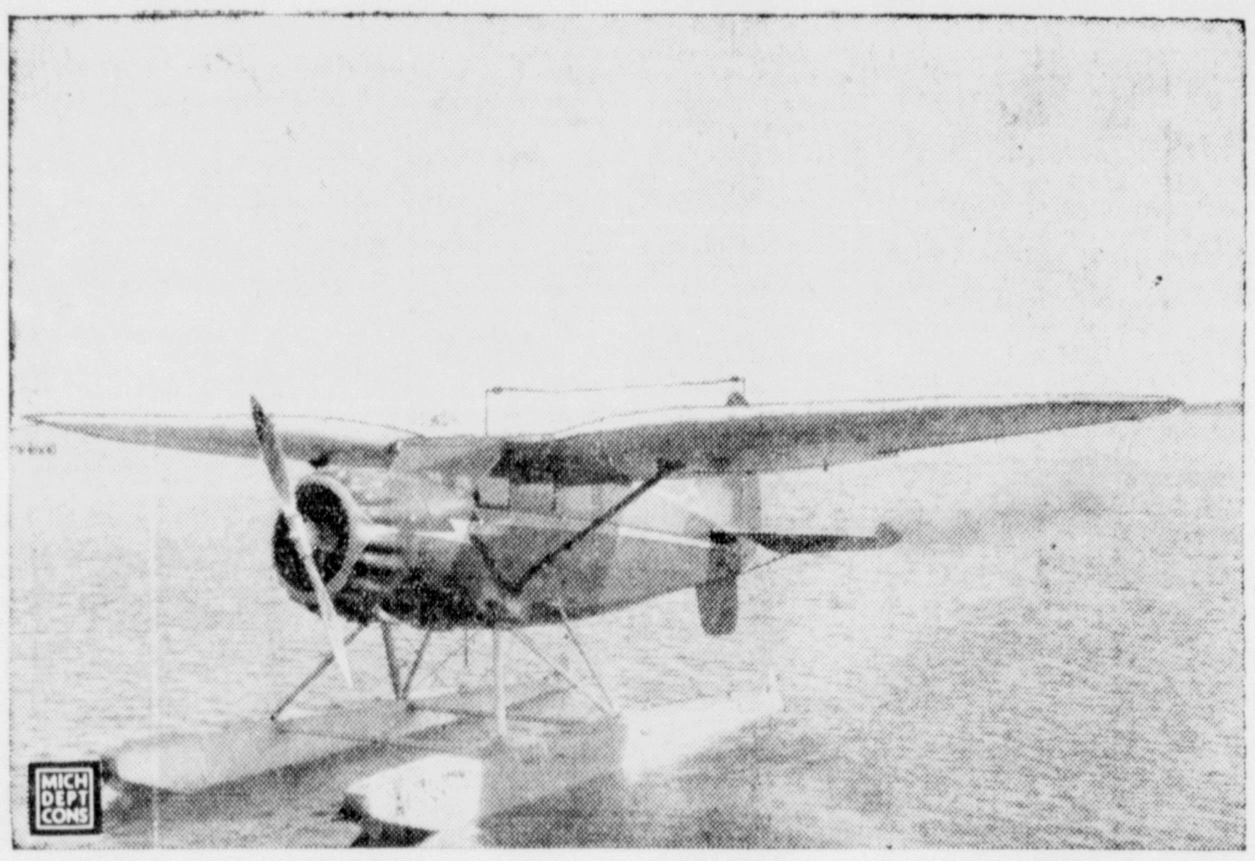
Bass also can be taken on this outfit, do not be in too great a hurry to bring in your lure but allow it to lie still on the surface with an occasional jiggle or jerk of the rod-tip to give animation to it. Try to imitate a fallen bug lying on the water and unable to rise. Strike quickly when a fish hits as very often it will spit out the lure before you can transmit your thought to action with your hands.

When fish are feeding on or near the surface, becareful not to approach too close nor to scare them. Don't try for distance as 30 to 40 feet of line can be handled more easily than a long line, and you will lose fewer fish and cast more accurately and have fewer hangups.

PARK NAMED FOR QUEEN

Vancouver, B. C. (U.P.)—The Little Mountain Park area of Vancouver is Queen Elizabeth Park now, named in memory of the royal visit to Canada last year.

Air Patrol



Airplane operated jointly by department of conservation, Michigan state police and highway department has been fitted with pontoons and is being used to discourage illegal commercial fishing practices. Illegally-placed nets can be seen easil yfrom the air and the pilot and observer are in constant touch with patrol boats by short wave radio. When necessary, the airplane can land alongside a fishing boat which is outrunning one of the conservation department's patrols.

Wisconsin Writer Has Praises For Upper Peninsula Beauty Spots, Canadian Park

BY CLARA HUSSONG
(Green Bay Press-Gazette)

"If you go up into the Canadian 'Soo' country, be sure to see Hiawatha park and Crystal falls," a friend told us when we were planning our camping trip this year. Last year, regular readers of this column will remember, we were forced to return after our second day out because of the illness of our son.

Our plans this year were about the same as those we had last year: A few days visiting and camping in northern Michigan, a short stay across the border and then, if time and money held out, a few days in the copper country of northern Michigan. We had a movie camera along this time and hoped to get some good shots of animals, birds, flowers and natural scenes.

This was our first experience in taking movies and all along the way we kept our eyes open, looking for something to record on our color films. At Hermansville, where we stayed a day visiting relatives, we took our first movies. A patch of two flowers on a mossy knoll happened to be our very first shot.

Grows In Shade

Twin flowers are beloved particularly by those of Swedish lineage because the Latin name of the flower, Linnaea borealis, honors their pioneer botanist, Carolus Linnaeus. The plant is a somewhat woody, evergreen vine and the pairs of pink bells appear in June and last through most of the summer. In Wisconsin we can find it in the northern parts of the state, being most common in shady evergreen woods. It is quite common on the Lake Michigan side of Door county.

Other movies we took in the woods near Hermansville were of a scarlet tanager, cedar waxwings, cinnamon ferns and woodsy scenes. The next day we drove on to Manistique, stopping at the Big Springs to take pictures of the barge and of a moccasin flower we found growing near the lodge.

While we were setting up the tent on the camping grounds at Manistique we discovered that it was just a year to the day since we had been there, but this time Mickey said his tummy felt fine. We enjoyed the chorus of bird music coming from the clumps of cedars all around us, and later the full moon rising over the lake.

Deer Avoid Camera

The next day on our way to Detour we saw a mother ruffed grouse leading her chicks across the road. We were to see this happen again several times before the trip was over. We saw several deer crossing the road but they always disappeared before we could take any pictures. Some colorful shots we got, however, were of Indian paint brush and that beautiful weed, orange hawkweed, which covered acres of sandy ground in Michigan. It bears a beautiful flower but it is one of our most dangerous weeds.

Around our camp on the shores of Lake Huron in Detour we saw and heard white-throated sparrows, redstarts, black-throated green warblers and others of the warbler family, veeries, whip-poor-wills and spotted sandpipers. That evening we roasted potatoes in our camp fire and watched the boats pass by. The next morning we saw many of the same boats going through the locks at Sault Ste. Marie.

The American locks could be visited (minus cameras) but the Canadian locks were closed to visitors. After we left the ferry dock we asked our way to Hiawatha park and drove to the spot, about six miles north. It had started to drizzle but we pitched our tent next to the community kitchen and hoped for sunshine the next day.

It rained the next day, and the next and the next, but we were so charmed with our surroundings we couldn't leave until we had taken some pictures. The park, a private one, has an area of over a thousand acres and is situated 1,100 feet above sea level in a setting of white pine, white spruce, maples, birch, mountain ash and poplar.

Worth The Climb

Part of the park is a deep rocky gorge down which flows the Silver creek and its branches. There are numerous waterfalls but only the four largest are given names. Hiawatha Falls, Minnehaha Falls, Crystal Falls and the fourth whose name I've forgotten, were all so beautiful we couldn't decide which was our favorite.

A beautiful bathing pool was situated down at the bottom of the canyon. The steps leading to the pool and the paths to the falls were very steep and the climb was tiring, but the sight of falls, the huge granite rocks, luxurious clumps of ferns and massive trees was worth the climb.

From the tourist cabins at the edge of the canyon the view was terrific and the manager and his wife told us that in autumn when the leaves were colored it was still more beautiful. Jim and Bill, the boys of the family managing the park, acted as our guides on our hikes through the park and in our drives through the surrounding country.

Next week I'll tell about some of the birds we found in this place.

Rare Specimens Of Animals Head For U. S. On Boat

Washington—With a 700-pound pigmy hippopotamus as star of the passenger list, a rare and distinguished gathering of west African jungle animals took ship recently in Liberia and are now scheduled to arrive at Norfolk, Va., this weekend.

Obtained by Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoological park at Washington, the collection will show America some species of Liberia's wildlife seldom seen outside that country.

Included in the collection, which was obtained with the aid of hundreds of natives, are antelopes no bigger than rabbits, rare crocodiles, big and little parrots, and several crates of monkeys.

Laughing Whitefish Falls, Site Of New Park In The Making

Munising—The State Conservation Department with the aid of Munising and Alger county organizations is proceeding with negotiations for the transfer of 900 acres in the vicinity of Laughing Whitefish falls from the Ford Motor Company of Detroit.

The 900 acres near Sundell on M-28 will include the falls, gorge and Laughing Whitefish Lake. The property is owned by the Ford Motor company and logging operations were being carried on there until this spring when petitions were sent to Ford. Transfer of the title to the property to the State Conservation Department for park purposes is expected to soon be made.

The peak of Michigan coal mining was reached in 1907, when 2,035,858 tons were produced.

FEDERAL AID GIVEN EAGLE

Emblem of America Now Protected By New Law With Teeth

The bald eagle, symbol of American ideals of freedom, is now protected from all hunters and collectors by an act of Congress which has been approved by President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes has announced. Enforcement of the act will be delegated to U. S. game management agents and deputy agents of the Bureau of Biological Survey, who are charged with the conservation of the country's wildlife resources.

The "Bald Eagle Act" was sponsored by Senator David I. lesWalsh and Representative Charles R. Clason of Massachusetts. Declaring that the bald eagle is now threatened with extinction and expressing the desire to protect the bird that was adopted as the national symbol by the Continental Congress in 1782, the Act prohibits anyone from possession bald eagles in any manner, whether by taking, bartering, selling, or other means. The act protects the bird throughout the United States and its possessions, except Alaska.

Persons taking, possessing, or dealing in bald eagles will be liable to fines up to $500 or imprisonment up to six months or both.

Secretary Ickes, however, has been authorized to issue permits to take, possess, or transport bald eagles after investigations show such action is compatible with the preservation of the bird. The Act specifies he may issue these permits, when deemed advisable, to public museums, scientific societies, or zoological parks, or when he finds such action necessary for the protection of wildlife or of agricultural or other interests in any particular locality.

Pioneer farmers had little difficulty filling the family larder, because game, which finds food more abundant in the "edge" between the field and woodland, concentrated near the clearings.

Fur, Fin and Feather

By George Rintamaki

BY GEORGE RINTAMAKI

No major changes have been made in this coming season's upland game regulations and about the same rules will govern small game hunting this fall, the conservation department announces.

At a recent meeting of the commission at Charlevoix, seasons, bag limits and other regulations on rabbits, grouse, prairie chickens and other upland game were continued virtually unchanged. Some changes may be made in waterfowl regulations, but these will not be known until federal authorities establish them. State regulations will then be made to conform by the department of conservation.

It is doubtful as yet if northern Michigan's increase in waterfowl has been followed by a similar upswing in other sections of the lakes area, but conservationists predict a 45-day season again this fall. It is doubtful, however, that a longer season than that might be set. Drought conditions in some sections will see a shortage of breeding stock, it is feared, and controlled shooting may be necessary in areas that did produce an abundance of ducks.

The upper peninsula's grouse and prairie chicken season will open Oct. 1 and run for 20 days. Rabbit hunting also will get under way on that date. While the rabbit supply is believed holding good, many observers fear that the wet hatching season this spring may have cut the grouse supply considerably.

All in all, however, there is believed to be no alarming drop in the peninsula's game supply and hunters and trappers both expect a good year. A careful check was made by the game division during April, May and June and it included grouse, prairie chicken, rabbits, muskrats, beaver, otter, squirrels, and a study of ducks by the biological survey.

As a guide for fixing this season's bag limits and length of seasons a report of last year's hunter success was compiled from kill report returns. Last year each hunter afield killed 4.6 grouse on an average for a total of 296.676 birds for 64.249 hunters. The prairie chicken kill was 26.644 birds.

Rabbit hunters last year rang up a total of 1,903,382 dead bunnies, with a drop from the previous season noted especially in the lower peninsula. Hunter average on rabbits last year was 6.04 per return for the season.

Know Your Bass

The majority of the bass fishermen have difficulty in identifying the two species of black bass. While the distinguishing features of large and small mouth bass are as the names imply, the occasional angler still has trouble unless he has one of each species to compare.

On the other hand, some fishing guides can distinguish the difference on the hooked fish's first leap out of the water. Familiarity, of course, makes identification easy. The one rule many guides point out as an identification is the fact that the back of the mouth of the large-mouth bass always extends back of a vertical line as drawn down from the center of the eye.

Then too, the scale count on the gill cover of the small-mouth runs higher. The best identification, however, is the length of the mouth.

Traverse City, Mich.—Minnie the Moocher isn't just a character out of a song around here. Minnie is a small-mouth bass who is spending her fifth summer at a resort on Spider Lake.

Oren Olson, resort owner, tamed and trained Minnie to eat out of his hand five years ago and each year she returns after the ice goes out.

Hundreds of vacationers are entertained by Minnie jumping clear out of the water to take a frog dinner from Olson's hand. She now weighs upwards of four pounds.

TREE PARALLELS HIS LIFE

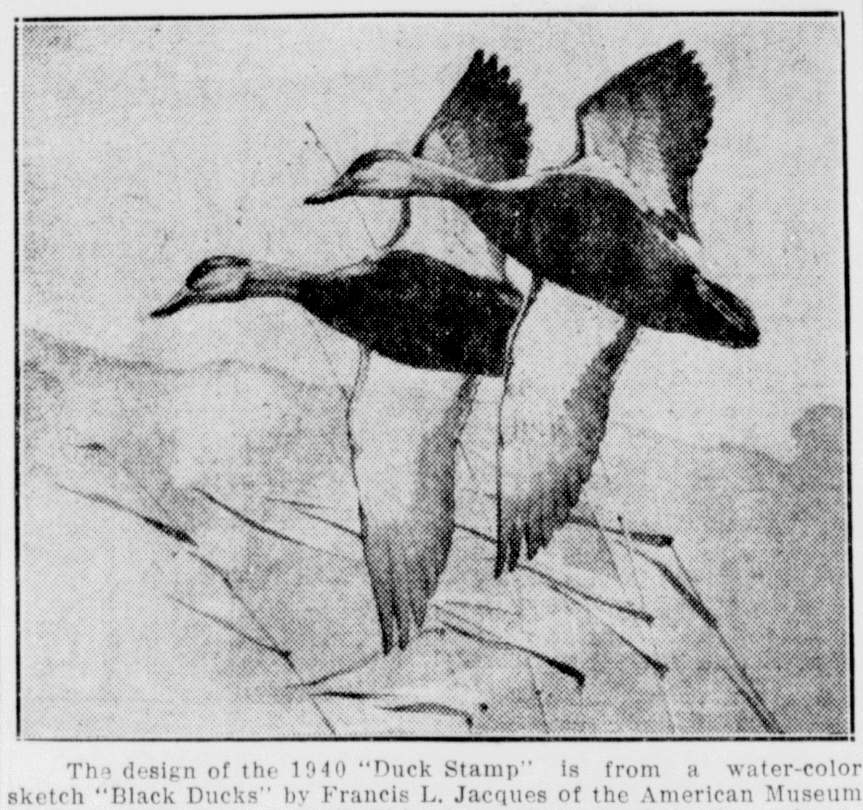
The 1940 Duck Stamp



The design of the 1940 "Duck Stamp" is from a water-color sketch "Black Ducks" by Francis L. Jacques of the American Museum of Natural History art staff. This stamp the seventh in the series to be issued is now on sale at post offices throughout the nation. Sales of the previous stamp in the series, the 1939 issue at the Escanaba postoffice totalled 472 an increase of over a hundred from the approximately 350 sold in the previous year.

3,472,585 Duck Stamps Sold In Past Five Years

Returns from the sales of duck stamps in the first five years during which they were required totaled $3,472,582, according to a Bureau of Biological survey report made public today by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes. The duck stamp, common name for the Federal migratory bird hunting stamp which sells for $1 and is required of all waterfowl hunters over 16, has helped finance the Federal program for buying, developing, and maintaining waterfowl refuges.

Stamp sales during the 5-year period were reported as follows: 635,001 (1934); 448,204 (1935); 603,623 (1936); 783,039 (1937); and 1,002,715 (1938). Returns that include the 1939 hunting season will not be available until after June 30, 1940, it was pointed out, since the stamps remain on sale throughout the fiscal year.

The duck stamp requirement became effective July 1, 1934. The first issue went on sale on August 14 in accordance with an Act of Congress that provides that, after a deduction of not more than 10 per cent for administrative expenses, the money returns shall be available for the "location, ascertainment, acquisition, administration, maintenance, and development of suitable areas for inviolate migratory-bird sanctuaries, under the provisions of the Migratory Bird Conservation act, to be expended for such purposes in all respects as moneys appropriated pursuant to the provisions of such act."

The act directs that duck stamp funds may also be used for the administration, maintenance, and development of other national wildlife refuges frequented by migratory game birds; and for such investigations on such refuges and elsewhere in regard to migratory waterfowl as may be deemed essential for the highest utilization of the refuges and for the protection and increase of these birds.

Expenditures Reported

On July 1, 1939, the funds available to the Biological Survey from the 5-year sales, according to the bureau's report, had totaled $3,456,766, out of the sales total of $3,472,582. Receipts from sales, it was explained, are not immediately available to the Bureau because of the necessity for converting the moneys collected by the post offices into funds for expenditure.

There was a balance of $1,174,140 reported as held by the Biological Survey on July 1, 1939. It was pointed out that the bureau's policy is to hold most of each year's fund for expenditure the following year.

Administrative expenditures in the 5-year period were reported as totaling $428,751, including $81,492 more than a 10 per cent deduction during the first year when Congress specially authorized an expenditure of $150,000, and $144,992 was thus used. The administrative deduction, it was explained, pays the cost of printing and distributing the stamps and also helps in administration and enforcement of the Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp act and the Migratory Bird Treaty act.

With the balance of $1,174,140 on hand and the $428,751 used for administrative purposes, the Biological Survey reported the following expenditures as representing the total use of moneys available up to July 1, 1939:

Examinations, surveys and acquisition of land	$303,715.94*
Purchase of water rights	43,454.71*
Development work on refuges obtained in other ways, as well as with proceeds from the duck stamp sales	984,799.79*
Maintenance and operation of refuges	449,614.57
Research	72,289.99

*—A total of $1,331,970.44 for establishing and developing refuge areas.

Nucleus for Program

With the duck stamp money as a nucleus, said the wildlife agency, the creation of a nation-wide system of migratory waterfowl refuges was assured. During the duck stamp's first five years the refuge program advanced rapidly. In 1934, there were 102 national wildlife refuges. On June 30, 1939, there were 260. More than half of these areas were primarily for migratory waterfowl.

The waterfowl program, it was recalled, was greatly enlarged when $11,500,000 of emergency funds were made available for land purchase, and CCC camps and relief labor were assigned to wildlife projects. During the fiscal years 1936 to 1939 the number of relief workers on this work were as follows: 464 (1936, in North Dakota only); 2,172 (1937); 2,993 (1938); and 2,132 (1939). In 1935, the CCC assigned 3 camps to as many areas. During the 1939 fiscal year there was an average of 32 camps and 1 side camp detailed to 32 refuges in 24 states.

Some 1,600,000 acres of land were purchased with emergency and special funds. Most of the areas were dammed lakes or marshes that had been reduced in value by one or more adverse factors. Other lands were added from the public domain by executive orders and by transfer from other Federal agencies. As a result of these activities, the entire national refuge system grew during the duck stamp's first five years until by June 30, 1939, there were 13,530,160 acres set aside for the protection and development of wildlife.

Waterfowl	139	1,613,632
Migratory-bird	63	951,812
Wildlife in general	17	4,298,128
Nongame birds chiefly	29	106,712
Big game	12	6,559,376
Total all refuges	260	13,530,160

Waterfowl, it was pointed out, are protected on every refuge where they are found, although the refuge may have been established for another primary purpose.

STUDENTS FIGHT FOREST BLAZES

NYA Program Develops Highly Trained Oregon Group

Corvallis, Ore (UP) — Organization of a highly-trained group of fire fighters to battle conflagrations in Oregon forests this summer has been announced by E. G. Mason, assistant forestry dean, Oregon State College, who calls it a "city fire department adapted to forest fire purposes."

The service is established at the Peavy arboretum, just north of Corvallis, as a National Youth Administration camp where 75 students in the school of forestry at Oregon State College receive special training in fighting forest fires.

The men are in charge of George H. Schroeder, assistant professor of forestry, who is considered the best qualified specialist in forest fire fighting in any forestry school in the United States.

The NYA pays the men $30 a month while they are in camp. From this the students will pay their own board. Camping facilities have been provided by the Oregon Forest Fire Association, which is one of the sponsors of the project.

The men are available for fire fighting service in unts of five men. Busses are available to take them to fires throughout western Oregon and even in parts of eastern Oregon, if desirable.

While on actual fire duty, they receive regular fire fighters' wages. When they return to camp, they work in the McDonald experimental forest and study fire fighting.

Besides affording opportunity for summer employment for students, the plan provides men with additional training for their professional careers in forestry work, and affords a nucleus of trained fire fighters for emergency call.

Sponsors are the Oregon Forest Fires Association, Pacific Northwest Forest Experiment Station, the U. S. Forest Service and the O. & C. Land Administration.

The Isle of Man, like Ireland, has no snakes or toads.

TUESDAY LAST DATE TO FILE

Many Candidates Already Enter September Primaries

Tuesday, July 23, at five o'clock is the deadline for the filing of nominating petitions for the September primary elections and it is likely that a long list of candidates for the various county offices will be entered prior to the deadline.

Numerous petitions, not yet filed, are being circulated in the county. Petitions have been filed already for 13 candidates on both the Republican and Democratic tickets.

Candidates already in the race follow:

Democratic—John A. Goudreau for sheriff; John B. Nessman, county clerk and register of deeds; Frank W. Voisine, coroner; Harvey Ekdahl, drain commissioner; Harold M. Eakley, surveyor.

Republican—John M. Hewett and Fred R. Griffin, sheriff; Laura A. Williams, county treasurer; Leslie Bouschor, county clerk and register of deeds; William J. Sheahan and James R. Fitzharris, prosecuting attorney; Sven Johnson, coroner.

Briefly Told

Concert At Infirmary — The weekly WOW band concert will be presented Monday evening at the county infirmary instead of Friday because of the blueberry festival, Director George Hamill has announced.

* * *

Methodist Ladies Aid — The Methodist Ladies' Aid will meet Wednesday afternoon at the Keith Bundy cottage, Indian lake, for a picnic. Members are to bring pot luck lunch and their own dishes. A large attendance is desired.

* * *

Relief Clients—Potatoes will be distributed from the surplus food store, to relief clients on Monday between the hours of 9 and 4 o'clock. Clients are to bring their own containers.

* * *

Pie Social—The Philathea Class of the First Baptist church will hold a blueberry pie social on Friday, July 27, on the parsonage lawn. Blueberry pie, ice cream and coffee will be served. The public is invited to attend.

* * *

Norwegian Ladies' Aid—The Norwegian Ladies' Aid will meet Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Leo Dean, West Elk street. All members are urged to attend.

Imrie And McGillis Marriage Announced

Mrs. William John Imrie of Red Oak, Iowa, announces the marriage of her daughter, Dorothea, to Hugh R. MacGillis, which took place in the rectory of St. Francis De Sales church in Manistique on Saturday, July 20th. The couple was attended by Miss Frances MacGillis of Oak Park, Ill., and Mr. D. J. MacGillis of Manitowoc, Wis., sister and brother of the groom.

After the wedding a breakfast was served for friends and relatives at the Ossawinamakee hotel in Manistique.

Air Brush Painting Of Queen Exhibited

A beautiful air brush color painting of Mildred Beaudoin, blueberry festival queen, by Bud Malloy, local artist, is being displayed at the Chamber of Commerce office here, and is attracting considerable interest. The painting is approximately three feet in height.

Commercialize Berries In Eastern Part Of U. S.

BY EDRIE VAN DORE

My friend Sam Higgins of Charlestown, R. I. (he was once a surveyor in northern Michigan and Higgins Lake is named for him) takes great pleasure in summer in stepping out of his back door and picking a bowlful of dewy blueberries for breakfast. There is a veritable blueberry plantation in the sandy wasteland bordering on the Great Salt Pond between Sam's grey shingle home and the ocean. Sam is not one to waste any gift generously bestowed on man by Nature; more than that, he appreciates and uses such a gift to its fullest possibilities.

We do our own blueberry picking, in the Berkshire hills of Massachusetts, in a high bog where the only stable footing is on hummocks between bushes. Leaping gingerly from one to another with pails swinging precariously, our arms and legs covered against mosquitoes, we gather a cool, fresh treasure of these, the summer's jewels. The blueberry bog is not far from the civilized haunts of man, as miles go, but we know of no one else that visits it, and when we ourselves are in the swamp, no other sounds are heard than our own voices and those of insects and birds. The warm air is heavy with silence and sweet scents. We are a primeval people once more, picking the fruit of the land for our food.

Except for spots such as Sam's and ours, they say that wild berries are dying out in this country. It might be that forest protection and prompt dousing of fires will in time eliminate the wild blueberry. In such a case, the work being done at present to cultivate the blueberry and make it a garden product under controlled conditions will bear fruit in more than one sense of the word.

Like the wild berry, cultivated blueberries do not grow everywhere. They require very acid soil and just the right amount of moisture. Too little acid or the slightest touch of alkali; too much water or not enough, and death will result for the blueberry plant.

"Blueberry plants will usually survive a flooded soil for some time during the dormant season, but if too much water is present after active root growth starts, the plants are likely to be injured, and if the excess water is present for too long a time, the plants will almost certainly die," says Stanley Johnston in an article about blueberries in the Rural New Yorker of January 27, 1940. "It has been also observed that plants growing in poorly drained areas are more subject to heaving, and are more susceptible to frost injury," continues the author. "Too little moisture, on the other hand, results in smaller growth and decidedly lower yields. If sufficient moisture is not available, the plants will fail to produce fruit buds. A very great deficiency will result in the death of the plants."

A number of seed catalogues now list blueberry plants and there are companies specializing in berry plants which offer large and luscious specimens. These berries sell in the market at twice the price of wild berries, due of course to the growing and packing expenses. New Jersey, North Carolina, and Michigan share this crop, which is sold through the Blueberry Cooperative Association. All its members must meet certain grades and standards.

Production in cultivated berries is said to begin the year after planting, if all rules have been followed and all hazards safely hurdled. Proper pruning, fertilization, and cultivation are necessary for the best results. New Jersey growers are now spraying their bushes for the control of the blueberry maggot, and in Michigan some dusting is being done to check the blueberry fruit worm. Such pests will no doubt spread with further cultivation of such plantations.

Under good conditions, it seems, a yield of 1000 quarts per acre may be obtained in the fourth year after planting. Full bearing is reached in eight or ten years, when 2,000 or 3,000 quarts per acre should be picked. Blueberry bushes live long and lustily—some are known that are probably past the century mark and still flourishing.

Amateurs are advised not to rush brashly into the blueberry field until assured by experts that they can offer perfect soil and climatic conditions. Commercial growers or experiment stations, some of them at state agricultural colleges, can analyze the individual situation and give a decision.

The difference between highbush and lowbush blueberries is important. "It should be emphasized," states Mr. Johnston in his article, "that nearly all of the improvement work has been with the highbush blueberry, which is not found growing naturally in the more northern districts. For instance, it is doubtful if the highbush blueberry can be grown in northern Michigan, except possibly in a very few places where the climate is moderated by the influence of the Great Lakes. Attempts to grow the highbush blueberry in northern Minnesota and Wisconsin have not been considered successful. Any attempts to grow the improved varieties of the highbush blueberry in areas outside of its natural range should be on a small scale and considered as entirely experimental. Frost is a serious menace to the blueberry crop. It is always more prevalent and serious in depressions or 'pockets' and such sites should be avoided. Wide open areas of large size are to be preferred."

Blueberry plants are propagated mostly from cuttings made in early spring from the past season's growth, now dormant wood. They are slow in rooting and require special handling.

A variety of plants can be obtained to give a succession of fruit during the growing season, in early, midseason, and late summer. Each grower needs to study the varieties and choose those most suited to his needs.

As time goes on, quite possibly we'll have professional blueberry planters, and the wild blueberry will be only a matter of memory. Somehow, excellent as the larger, tamer globules will be for muffins and for pies, we cannot believe they will have quite the same flavor as those growing wild and free, in all sizes and shades of dusty or shiny blue, in the wastelands and the swamps throughout the land.

FLAVIN GIVEN PRISON TERM

Bakery Theft Results In Sentence of One to Five Years

James Flavin, who was employed as a baker at the Manistique Bakery, was sentenced to one to five years in Marquette prison when he pleaded guilty to larceny at a special session of circuit court in Bay Mills township, Chippewa county, Thursday afternoon.

Flavin was sentenced by Circuit Judge Herbert Runnels, who recommended that Flavin serve the minimum of the sentence, one year in the state branch prison at Marquette.

Flavin was taken to Chippewa county by Sheriff John Hewett, Trooper Clark and Prosecutor W. J. Sheahan after he had indicated a desire to plead guilty at a special court session in Chippewa county now rather than to remain in the county jail here until fall awaiting the next term of circuit court.

A thumbprint on the cash register at the Manistique Bakery led to Flavin's arrest on a charge of stealing $79 from the register. Although he denied the charge at first, Flavin later confessed, admitting that he broke the register to divert suspicion.

Flavin was taken to Marquette for commitment yesterday.

WILL SPEAK AT REUNION

Hancock — The Rev. J. Y. M. Stevens of Dearborn, Mich., a former Copper Country Methodist pastor, is coming here Sunday, August 4, to deliver the address at the 34th annual Central Mine reunion, to be held in the church at Central, it was announced yesterday by George H. Roberts who, with Henry Cox of Calumet, is on the program committee.

Mr. Stevens is widely known throughout the Copper Country, having occupied several pastorates in the district. An able speaker and of English parentage, Mr. Stevens' first employment in the United States was at a copper mine in Copperfield, Vermont. Completing his public school course at West Fairlee, Vermont, he attended the academy at Thetford Hill, also in Vermont, where he took a semi-business course. He was graduated from the Methodist seminary at Montpelier in 1893 and after preaching for two years in the Vermont conference attended the Garret Biblical Institute at Evanston, Ill.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INFORMATION

Errors in advertisements should be reported immediately. The Daily Press will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion.

All ads are restricted to their proper classification and to the regular Daily Press style of type. The publishers reserve the right to edit or reject any classified advertising copy.

Advertising ordered for irregular insertions takes the one time rate. No ad is taken for less than a basis of three lines. Count six average words to the line. An average word contains six letters.

Accounts unpaid after 20 days will not be granted further credit.

Charged ads will be received by telephone and if paid at the Daily Press office within six days from the first day of insertion cash rates will be allowed.

Ads ordered for three or six times and stopped before expiration will be charged for only the number of times the ad appeared and adjustment made at the rate earned.

The Daily Press makes an earnest effort to keep its advertising columns free of deceptive and dishonest announcements. Readers are requested to report unsatisfactory dealings with any advertiser in these columns.

PLEASE DO NOT ask for information on blind ads. The Daily Press will not disclose the identity of any box number or give any information not contained in the ad itself. A flat charge of 10c will be made for each box number issued.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

ESKYS WIN 2 LEAGUE GAMES

Advance Into Second Place In League Standings

By defeating the Indians and Buck Inn in games played this week in the National League, the Eskys advanced into second place in the league standings. They trail the league leading White Birch crew by a game and a half.

This week's schedule is as follows: Monday, National Guard vs. St. Ann CYO, No. 2, Fair Store vs. Eskys, No. 4, LeLoff's vs. White Birch at Flat Rock; Tuesday, Indians vs. Buck Inn, No. 4, Wednesday, Indians vs. Fair Store, No. 2, St. Ann CYO vs. White Birch, No. 4; Thursday, National Guard vs. Buck Inn, No. 1, Eskys vs. LeLoff's, No. 3.

The league standings follow:

	W.	L.	Pct.
White Birch	15	2	.882
Eskys	11	3	.786
Indians	12	4	.750
St. Ann CYO	9	5	.643
LeLoff's	3	4	.429
Buck Inn	6	11	.353
Fair Store	3	12	.200
National Guard	1	14	.067

Only the league leading Sherman's and the fourth place Ford V8's teams retained their positions in last week's American softball league play. All the rest either gained or lost, the Escanabans trouncing the Paper Mill and winning second place ranking. The Escanabans, composed largely of the talent assembled and collected by Jens Jensen in former years, got off to a poor start and at one time were in seventh position but have made a steady climb. In their only game with them they defeated the Sherman team and are looking forward to their next meeting.

The Paper Mill team has been jinxed a great part of the season. They lead all teams in number of games rained out, postponed, and games to be replayed. For approximately a week and a half, all three pitchers, Anderson, Greenless, and Heidenreich were on the sick or injured list.

This week's schedule is as follows: Monday—Red Ribbons vs. Norstrom Motors, No. 1. Tuesday—Liberty Loans vs. Escanabans No. 3. Wednesday—Ford V8's vs. St. Pat CYO, No. 1; Shermans vs. Paper Mill at hardball diamond. Thursday—Liberty Loans vs. Norstroms, No. 2; Shkermans vs. Red Ribbons, No. 4. Friday—Ford V8's vs. Escanabans, No. 2; St. Pat CYO vs. Paper Mill, No. 4.

Standings:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Shermans	10	4	.714
Escanabans	9	5	.643
Paper Mill	7	4	.637
Ford V8's	8	7	.533
St. Pat CYO	6	7	.462
Red Ribbons	5	8	.385
Liberty Loans	5	9	.357
Norstroms	5	11	.313

The Gophers dropped two and the City Utilities won two placing them in the lead in the Old Timers' Softball league at the end of the week. The Utilities rallied to overcome a four run lead held by the Ball Hawks Friday night, who have become one of the strong contenders in the league although they have still to win a game. The Gophers in both their games were handicapped by injuries and illness, particularly in the loss of Cliff Beaudin who has been one of the spark plugs of the team and may be lost for the season.

This week's schedule is as follows: Tuesday—I. Stephenson vs. City Utilities, No. 2. Wednesday—Gophers vs. Ball Hawks, No. 3. Friday Gophers vs. City Utilities, No. 1; Ball Hawks vs. I. Stephenson, No. 3.

Standings:

	W.	L.	Pct.
City Utilities	5	2	.714
Gophers	6	3	.667
I. Stephenson	4	3	.571
Ball Hawks	0	7	.000

The schedule for the senior girls' softball league is as follows: Tuesday—St. Ann CYO vs. North Siders. Wednesday—See Jays vs. Tip Tops. Thursday—St. Ann CYO vs. Tip Tops. Friday—North Siders vs. See Jays.

Standings:

	W.	L.	Pct.
See Jays	6	0	1.000
Tip Tops	2	4	.334
St. Ann CYO	2	4	.334
North Siders	2	5	.286

There was no change in the respective standings of the teams in the Midget softball league play last week. This week's feature battle will be between the undefeated Champs from So. 19th Street playground and the Midgets from North Escanaba playground.

The schedule is as follows: Monday—Champs vs. Midgets at No. Esc.; Dodgers vs. White Sox at So. 19th; Aces vs. Eagles at Jr. High. Wednesday—Midgets vs. White Sox at No. Esc.; Cubs vs. Eagles at So. 19th; Dodgers vs. Aces at Jr. High.

Standings:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Champs	8	0	1.000
Midgets	7	1	.875
Cubs	3	2	.600
Eagles	2	2	.500
Aces	0	7	.000
Dodgers	0	7	.000
White Sox	0	1	.000

This week's schedule in the Cadet softball league is as follows: Monday—Eskys vs. Blue Jays at Jr. High. Tuesday—All Americans vs. Blue Jays at So. 19th. Wednesday—All Americans vs. Eskys at No. Escanaba.

More teams are needed in this league. Any boys 15 years of age or under are eligible to compete. Balls and bats are furnished by the department of parks and recreation and games are conducted with the cooperation of WPA recreational leaders o nthe city playgrounds.

The lead in the Church Softball League will be at stake Tuesday night when the Norwegian Lutherans meet the Bethany Lutherans on No. 1 diamond. Standings remain the same as in last week's play. The schedule for the week is as follows:

Monday—First Methodist vs. St. Stephens, No. 3. Central Methodist vs. Presbyterians, Lighthouse diamond. Tuesday, Bethany Lutheran vs. Norwegian Lutheran, No. 1.

Standings:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Norwegian Luth.	5	0	1.000

Presbyterians	0	5	.000

INDIANS BREAK LOSING STREAK

Foxx and Doerr Homers of No Avail In a 9 to 6 Battle

Boston, July 20. (AP)—The Cleveland Indians snapped a six-game losing streak today by pounding out a 9-6 victory over the Boston Red Sox in a free-hitting melee marked by five home runs.

Ken Keltner and Ray Mack, who collected the brace of Cleveland circuit wallops, led the vicious Indian 13-hit attack with three hits each. Skipper Joe Cronin, Jimmy Foxx and Bobby Doerr each blasted a ball out of the park in the losing Sox cause.

Mel Harder pitched most of the distance for the Indians and, although hit hard, was effective in the clutches and several times cut short Boston threats with strikeouts or double-play balls.

Ancient Lefty Grove started for the Sox but was tagged for four runs in the second with none out and left the game. Earl Johnson, a recent importation from Rocky Mount, succeeded him and flashed some fine pitching until the Indians got to him in the seventh to break a 4-4 tie with a three-run cluster.

WALTERS WINS OVER GIANTS

Reds' Hurler Marks Up 14th Win In Three Hit Effort

Cincinnati, July 20. (AP)—Bucky Walters trotted out his hurling handcuffs today, snapped them securely on the New York Giants and tossed a three-hitter to give the Reds a 5 to 1 victory for his 14th win of the year.

In tightening their grip on first place in the National league, the Rhinelanders got to their old "jinx," Bill Lohrman, for all five of their runs before he headed for the showers, in the seventh. Lohrman whipped them four times out of five last year, but he was well walloped today as the Reds piled up 13 hits.

A three-run blast in the sixth put the game on ice. In this frame, an error by Mickey Witek, who took over the Giants' shortstop chores after Billy Jurges retired because of the heat, and doubles by Ival Goodman, Mike McCormick and Harry Craft accounted for the runs. Craft's two-bagger knocked the final two tallies across.

Walters just toyed with the Giants. He had a no-hitter for three frames. Then, in the fourth, Babe Young's sixth homer of the year ruined that and gave the Giants their only run.

Kinnick 60,000 Votes In Lead In All Star Polling

Chicago, July 20. (AP)—Nile Kinnick, Iowa's sensational halfback of 1939, is getting a heavy play from the country's grid fans in the nationwide poll to select an all-star college eleven to meet the Green Bay Packers in Soldier Field Aug. 29.

Don McNeill And Alice Marble Win

Baltimore, July 20 (AP)—Don McNeill, the Oklahoma City youth who is expected to challenge Bobby Riggs for the national men's singles title this summer, overwhelmed Jack Kramer, of California, to win the mid-Atlantic and Maryland state crowns. The scores were 9-7, 6-3, 6-2.

Their match was a climax to the opening contest in which Alice Marble of Beverly Hills, Calif., the national women's singles champion, and her little doubles teammate, Mary Arnold, also of California, captured the women's doubles crown from Mary Hardwick and Valerie Scott of England. The scores were 7-5, 6-4.

MARBLE-ARNOLD WIN

Baltimore, July 20. (AP)—Alice Marble, national women's singles champion, teamed with little Mary Arnold of California today to capture the Maryland and Middle Atlantic women's doubles tennis title by defeating Mary Hardwick and Valerie Scott of England, 7-5, 6-4.

Old Timers Team Practices Monday

The Old Timers baseball team, managed by Don Pelletier and coached by Ernie Bourke, will meet for practice Monday night at 6:15 o'clock at the 23rd street diamond.

All players are asked to be present for the practice session.

Players having Granada or Northwestern uniforms are requested to report, whether or not they intend to play.

Arnold "Dopey" Johnson, colorful football, basketball and baseball player, is the latest to report for the team. "Dopey" was quite a pitcher in his day. He has a no hit, no run game to his credit against Perkins in 1937.

Phillies Beat Cubs 9-3 As Series Opens

Chicago, July 20 (AP)—Led by First Baseman Art Mahan, who drove in five runs with a homer and three singles, the Philadelphia Phillies pounded out 16 hits to beat the Chicago Cubs, 9 to 3, before 5,382 today in the opening game of a series.

Outfielder Billy Nicholson scored two of the Chicago runs with a homer with Billy Herman on base in the sixth. It was Nicholson's 15th homer of the season and his third in three games.

Ike Pearson, Mississippi collegian, held the Cubs to eight hits for his second victory against seven defeats. His only other triumph was on May 7, when he shut out the Cubs here on four hits.

DODGERS SLIP AS CARDS WIN

Brooklyn Now 4 Games Out of First; Medwick Homers

St. Louis, July 20. (AP)—Lon Warneke fed Ducky Medwick a home run ball with one out in the first inning today, but clamped down tight after that and pitched the Cardinals to a 3 to 2 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers. The defeat dropped the Dodgers to four full games behind Cincinnati in the National league race.

The deciding run in this tight pitching duel came across in the seventh when Joe Orengo trippled to center and continued home on Dixie Walker's bad throw to the infield, thus giving long Lon his seventh win of the year.

Warneke gave up ten hits, while the Cards were collecting only seven off Tex Carleton and Curt Davis, the losing pitcher.

The Dodgers started off as though they were going to send Warneke to the showers. Cookie Lavagetto singled and Medwick knocked his eighth four bagger into the left field stands. The Cards came back with one in the second on Ernie Koy's triple and Warneke's single, and tied it up in the sixth on Mickey Owen's bunt-single and Johnny Hopp's double. Then Orengo broke up the ball game.

Score by innings:

Brooklyn	200 000 000—2	10	3
St. Louis	010 001 10x—3	7	0

Sox Set Scoring Record For Season

Philadelphia, July 20, (AP)—Pounding four pitchers for 19 hits, the Chicago White Sox set an American league scoring record for the season by defeating the Athletics, 19 to 7, here today.

The victory was the sixth in a row for southpaw Edgar Smith, who tired in the eighth and was replaced by Pete Appleton.

Chicago knocked George Caster and Bill Beckman out of the box with an eight-run assault in the first inning, turned loose a seven-run attack against Ed Heusser in the fifth and scored four more runs off Herman Besse in the ninth.

Bob Johnson hit his 18th homer of the year for the A's in the third inning. Mike Kreevich hit his sixth four-base clout in the opening frame with one on for the Sox.

Wolverines Play Eskymos Monday

The Wolverines will play the Eskymos Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the 23rd street diamond in a junior hard ball game.

WINS SCULL RACE

Red Bank, N. J., July 20 (AP)—A 29-year-old Belgian-born Canadian established a threat to Joe Burk's American sculling supremacy today by winning the senior single sculls event over favored Joe Angyal, Brooklyn fireman, in the 68th annual regatta of the National Association of amateur oarsmen. Theofeld A. (Ted) Dubois, representing the Winnipeg rowing club, beat Angyal by a full length in 7:45:4 in a duel that overshadowed all other performances.

TIGERS JOLT YANKEE HOPES

Greenberg Has Perfect Day As Detroit Wins 3-1

BY JUDSON BAILEY

New York, July 20 (AP)—The hopes of the world champion Yankees for getting back on the pennant trail were given a rude setback today by the Detroit Tigers, who clawed out a 3 to 1 victory to continue their mastery of the American league.

The Yanks ran afoul of eight-hit hurling by Hal Newhouser, Detroit's 19 year-old rookie southpaw, and a persistent offensive led by Hank Greenberg. The slugger had a perfect day at the plate with a triple, a double and two singles as his contribution to the Tiger total of 10 hits.

Kress, McCosky Hit

The Tigers started their trouble against Red Ruffing, who was charged with his seventh loss. Steve Sundra worked the rest of the way.

The run off Rufus the Red came in the third inning when Red Kress led off with a three-bagger and eventually scored on a fly by Barney McCosky. Kress and McCosky greeted Sundra with a pair of doubles and a run when he came on duty in the fifth. And in the sixth Greenberg tripled and scored on Rudy York's long fly.

This proved the end of Detroit's scoring, although the Tigers loaded the bases with none out in the eighth.

The crowd of 16,868 got their only kick in the sixth when Joe Di Maggio extended his hitting streak to 15 consecutive contests with a single that drove home Red Rolfe, who had singled.

The victory kept Detroit a game and half ahead of the Indians, and dropped the Yanks back to five games off the pace.

HUDSON'S WIN STREAK BROKEN

Washington Edged Out In Tight Ballgame Against Browns

Washington, July 20. (AP)—John Niggeling limited Washington to seven hits, all in the first four innings, today while the St. Louis Browns snapped rookie Sid Hudson's 6-game winning streak, 4 to 1.

The Senators took a 1 to 0 lead in the first inning, but Niggeling escaped trouble in the next three and from then on was invincible.

St. Louis tied the score in the fifth and nicked Hudson for two unearned runs in the seventh on three singles, a double steal, and Buddy Myer's error.

Walter Judnich blasted a home run to lead off the eighth.

Washington outfielder Buddy Lewis was banished from the game by Umpire Cal Hubbard when he protested that he had beaten out an infield tap in the fourth inning.

REDSKINS ARE LEADING LOOP

Manistique Engages Munising In Other Rainbow Game

Pepped up by their 4-1 victory over the Domincan Brothers in a night game Thursday night, the Escanaba baseball team is all set for the crucial game of the year this afternoon when the league leading Gladstone team invades the 23rd street diamond at 2:30 o'clock.

Gladstone comes here today with a record of two victories in three games with Escanaba and a lead of a game and a half over the second place Munising team. The Redskins come here, too, loaded for bear and ready to continue their mastery over the locals. They'll have Big Mac McIntyre, their ace hurler, who has been going great guns of late, ready for duty and set to chalk up his third victory over Escanaba.

Escanaba played one of its best games of the year Thursday night in disposing of the strong Dominican team Thursday night. Benny Greenless was in good form, allowing only four hits while his mates banged out 11 bingles, including a double by Flath. Menominee's only run came in the sixth inning.

Deering, Dominican pitcher, did a swell job of hurling, especially in the second inning when, with the bases loaded and none out, he struck out three batters in a row. A return game is planned for Thursday night at the local diamond.

While Escanaba and Gladstone are clashing on the local field Sunday, Manistique will travel to Munising in the second game on the Rainbow league schedule. This game has peculiar ramifications in that Manistique's only victories this year have been at the expense of Munising. The two teams have met three times and Manistique has won all three games. Munising, up near the tpo, confidently expects to break this monopoly today.

EXPECT TOUGH FIGHT

Gladstone, Mich. — The league leading Gladstone Redskins travel to Escanaba today to clash with their old rivals at the 23rd street diamond and Manager Dib Bovin and his crew are determined to make it three out of four over the county seaters.

The Redskins first victory over Escanaba was by a 13-0 score while the second was a 2-1 ten-inning affair. Despite the advantage in past games the Redskins are expecting a hard battle for the Escanaba nine is out to even the count if they can.

Manager Bovin will send McIntyre, who has a record of five victories against one defeat, to the mound in an effort to make it three in a row.

The Redskins at the present time are leading the league with a record of 6 victories against 3 defeats with Munising in second place with four wins and four losses. Escanaba ranks third with 3 victories and 4 defeats and Manistique is in the cellar with 3 victories and 5 losses.

REVOLTA LEADS IN GOLF OPEN

Eight Under Par for 72 Holes; Little, Guldahl Trail

BY EARL HILLIGAN

Chicago, July 20 (AP) — Curly-haired Johnny Revolta, long one of the finest short-iron artists in the game, demonstrated his wizardry around the green at Tam O'Shanter today in a three-under-par 69 which gave him a 36-hole total of 136 strokes and the leadership of the $5,000 Chicago open golf championship at the halfway point.

The 29 year old professional from Evanston, Ill., who had a fine five-under-par 67 yesterday, gave a brilliant exhibtiion of chip and explosion shots in four of his five birdies as he went out in 36, even par, and came home in 33, three under regulation figures.

Fine Approaches

In second place as the tourney headed for tomorrow's 36 hole final was Ralph Guldahl, two-time winner of the national open title. Putting on one of the finishes for which he is famous, he came in with a blazing 34-34--68, four under par, for a 36 hole total of 137. He made up for wildness off the tee with some fine approaches and brilliant work on the greens.

The amateur contingent, which gave the professional brigade a rousing battle in the opening round, were still in there "pitching." Jim Ferrier, open and amateur champion of Australia who led the field yesterday with a 66, came in today with a 73 for a 139 total which led the Simon-pure entries.

Also in the 139 bracket was Dick Metz, Chicago profesional who had a 71 today. In the 141 division were two amateurs, Wilford Wehrle of the home club, and Willie Turnesa, former national amateur titleholder. Wehrle had a second round 69 while Turnesa took a 73.

Little, Snead, Guldahl

Jim Foulis, Chicago, and Al Huske, DeKalb, Ill., were in the 142 bracket, with a Chicago professional, Bob McDonald, and Ben Hogan of New York, at 143. Among the equallers of par of 144 for the two rounds were Ed Oliver, Harry Cooper and Gene Sarazen.

Lawson Little, the national open champion who had a 73 yesterday, equalled par today for a 145 total. Sam Snead, a pre-tourney favorite with Guldahl, could do no better than a 75 today for a 36 hole total of 148. This put him well within the group of some 75 players who qualified for the finals but far away from a reasonable chance of copping the first prize money of $1,500.

DETROIT TOURNEY OPENS

Detroit, July 20 (AP)—The entry of Carl F. Kauffman of Pittsburg, only three-time champion, has been accepted for the nineteenth annual National Public Links golf tournament, it was announced today by Joseph C. Dey, Jr., executive secretary of the United States Golf Association.

Kauffmann's status in the tournament, which opens at the Rackham municipal course here Monday, was determined today by the public links committee of the U. S. G. A. Doubt concerning his eligibility for the tournament arose because of his ownership of a driving range.

Kauffmann won in 1927, 1928 and 1929 and was finalist in 1926.

Eighteen holes of the qualifying round will be played Monday and eighteen more Tuesday, with the 64 low scorers earning the right to continue in match play.

Burleigh Grimes, Manager At Grand Rapids, Suspended

Flint, Mich., July 20 (AP)—Burleigh Grimes, manager of the Grand Rapids team of the Michigan State baseball league and formerly manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was suspended indefinitely today as the result of an altercation July 7 with Umpire Bob Williams.

Judge W. G. Bramham of Durham, N. C., president of the National Association of Minor Leagues, directed T. J. Halligan, president of the Michigan league, to suspend Grimes pending further action by Bramham.

In a letter to Halligan, Braham said Williams informed him Grimes spit into the umpire's face during an argument in a game between the Grand Rapids and Saginaw clubs at Saginaw.

Halligan had fined Grimes $50 and suspended him for five days, following the incident. Grimes rejoined his team early this week.

"The $50 fine and five-day suspension is not adequate for this offense," Judge Bramham wrote Halligan, "and if Mr. Grimes did what he is charged with doing, he must be expelled from baseball and placed on the ineligible list for an undetermined period.

"Upon receipt of this letter, if the umpire's statement to me is correct, you will immediately notify Mr. Grimes of his suspension pending action by me."

Grimes' team was at Lansing for a league game today.

GRAND RAPIDS TENNIS

Grand Rapids, July 20. (AP)—Earl Cochell of Los Angeles, Cal., won the men's junior and senior singles championships today in the annual western Michigan open tournament at Kent Country club. Cochell defeated Rex Norris of Lansing, 6-3, 6-1, 6-1, in the men's finals and won from Fred Koveleski of Hamtramck, 6-1, 6-0, in the junior playoffs.

Escanaba Visitor Was Member Of Byrd Party

Little America, China, Nicaragua, Iceland, Hawaii and Manila are just a few of the spots which have been visited by Ernest M. Flaherty, chief boatswain's mate with the Byrd Expedition who is spending several days here at the home of John A. Fisher, 809 Fourth Avenue South.

Flaherty returned June 5 to Philadelphia after spending eight months with Byrd in the Antarctic region. He was one of 32 men selected from 22,000 in the Navy to accompany the expedition.

The expedition traveled the furthest south and east of any group that has ever explored in that region and at one time they were 156 days out of sight of land. The group discovered 1,400 miles of sea coast never before sighted and named it Ruppert Coast in honor of one of the sponsors of a previous Byrd exploration tour.

After leaving Boston the expedition went to Norfolk and thence to the Canal and to Little America, traveling 9,000 miles in approximately one and a half months. During the trip they encountered heavy seas, a typhoon in southern latitudes, saw a wind velocity that reached 95 to 100 miles per hour and bucked ice for 11 days.

Ice pilot and sailing master for the journey was Captain Johanssen, of Oslo, Norway, who was making his sixth Arctic trip. Johanssen is recognized as one of the outstanding Arctic navigators.

One of the most interesting experiences of the trip related by Flaherty was the story of a penguin rookery, which the group saw at Red Rock Bay. Observing the habits of the penguins, the members of the expedition noted that when the birds shed their feathers they ate pebbles in order to take on enough weight to be able to dip into the water for fish.

Commenting upon the dangers of icebergs in an Antarctic expedition Flaherty said that in one four hour watch the group counted 2,500 icebergs, ranging up to 100 feet in height.

Flaherty originally shipped with the Navy from Detroit. Since that time he spent two and a half years in China, eight months in Nicaragua and in 1924 was stationed in Iceland while a search was being made at that time for the first round the world flyers.

Today's Sport Parade

BY HENRY McLEMORE
United Press Staff Correspondent

New York, July 20, (UP) — I never have seen the coat-of-arms of the New York State Boxing commission, but I have a good idea of what it must look like.

The shield must have upon it dozens of horses being stolen, while dozens of barn doors are being frantically locked too late. And the motto of the commission, I am quite sure, must read: Betterum latterum than neverum, which, in a free translation from the latin, means better late than never.

If this isn't the coat-of-arms and motto, it certainly should be. Because the Messrs. Phelan, Brown and Wear (or would it be more appropriate to call them the Messrs. Uppers Phelan, Brown and Wear?) Always spend the day after a fight crying about things which happened that they could have prevented had they been on their thirty twinkling toes.

In Poor Shape

The commission's present grievance concerns the poor physical condition of lightweight champion Lew Jenkins when he entered the ring against Henry Armstrong at the Polo Grounds Wednesday night. Jenkins was in no shape to fight anybody, much less a man who has been as good as Armstrong has. The terms of the fight called for Jenkins to go 12 rounds if necessary, but Lew couldn't have shadow-boxed twelve rounds without having the shadow win.

"Shameful! Shameful!" cried the commissioners the day after the fight. "Why, oh why, was Jenkins allowed to get into the ring in such bad shape?"

Well, let's cry "shameful!" right back at them, and ask why, oh, why, they didn't check up on Jenkins' training methods and see to it that he followed a routine that would have assured him being ready to fight as the holder of a championship should fight. They knew where the Texan's training camp was, and it seems as they might have taken time off from their various businesses —brassiere manufacturing (Phelan) health camp (Brown) and shoe manufacturing (Wear)—to check for themselves as to how he was getting along.

Can't Blame Others

This business of trying to place the blame on Jenkins' manager, Hymie Caplin, or on Jenkins' manager-wife, Katie, is ridiculous. One of the chief duties of the commission is to protect the public, and one of the best ways to protect the public is to see to it that the men who fight under its patronage are fit to do battle.

Then there was the silly business about hand bandages that went on in the rival dressing rooms just before the fight, and which at one time threatened a calling off of the whole thing. The two fighters had made an agreement whereby Armstrong was to be allowed to use an extra bit of gauze and tape on his fists. At the very last minute the commission said this wouldn't be allowed, and threatened to call off the fight. This so angered Mike Jacobs that he threatened to call it off himself.

Now what sort of business is this? Commissioners squabbling away under the stands, while 35,000 waited to see a fight they had bought expensive tickets for. Private agreements concerning bandages are common in boxing, so the commissioners must have known about it, and if they were going to make an issue of it, why wait until the last second? If, on the other hand, they didn't know about it—why? Or, if they are against bandage conspiracies between managers, why haven't they put a stop to it by ruling on private agreements?

But here I go getting hot and bothered about the boxing commission. Why, oh why? Shame, shame, on you Henry McLemore.

SIRROCO TAKES ARLINGTON RACE

Gallahadion, Bimelich Finish Second and Third

BY CHARLES DUNKLEY

Chicago, July 20 (AP)—The $50,000 Arlington Classic, graveyard of champions, produced another stunning upset today when the bay gelding, Sirocco, captured the event at odds of 13 to 1.

Bimelech, potential 1940 three-year old champion, went to the post at odds of 3 to 5 and could do no better than third, three lengths behind Gallahadion, winner of the Kentucky Derby, which finished second, and seven lengths back of the flying Sirocco, owned by Charles T. Fisher, Detroit automobile body manufacturer.

Crowd Is Stunned

Sirocco, which never won a stake previously as a three year old, won so easily that the crowd of 35,000 was stunned.

He paid $28.20 to win, $8.20 to place and $2.80 to show. The prices on Gallahadion, owned by Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, Chicago, were $4.40 and $2.60. Bimelech, the prize thoroughbred of 80 year old Col. E. R. Bradley, returned $2.20 to show.

The field of six was well strung out in the final dash to the wire. Eight lengths back of Bimelech in fourth place was Arnold Hanger's Dit, another ten lengths away was A. C. Ernst's Alhalon, and the Millsdale stable's erratic Andy K was last, five lengths behind Alhalon.

There was little actual drama in the final 16th for Sirocco. With Jockey George Woolf on his back, he came romping home all by himself. But until Sirocco bounded out of fourth position to conquer the leading Bimelech and Gallahadion there was plenty of excitement.

Bimelech Falters

On the back stretch Dit took the lead, followed by Bimelech with Gallahadion and Sirocco trailing, and the crowd began to wonder when Bimelech would make his challenge.

Moving together, Gallahadion and Sirocco came up on the outside. The crowd looked on tensely as the Bradley colt tried to keep the lead, then faltered. He was all through coming into the stretch turn, where Siricco was on the outside and Gallahadion was closer to the rail.

For an instant Sirocco swerved to the inside sharply as he displaced Gallahadion from the lead.

The race had a gross value of $50,570, with $37,935 going to Fisher, who watched his horse triumph.

Los Angeles, Calif., July 20 (AP)—Thomas D. Taggert's long shot Big Flash scored a surprising victory in the $25,000 Hollywood derby today, leaving the favored Midland and Sweepida behind.

Big Flash, coupled with Woof Woof as an entry and ignored in pre-race predictions, came up with a rush to head Sweepida in a thrilling finish.

Tuberculosis Death Rate Remains Low

Tuberculosis deaths for the whole state last year held close to the record low of 1938, but rates of individual counties varied widely, according to the Michigan department of health.

Three northern counties of from 2,000 to 8,500 population reported no tuberculosis deaths in 1939. This does not mean, however, that tuberculosis does not exist in these counties. Crawford and Oscoda counties were free from tuberculosis deaths for the second consecutive year and the third county was Gladwin.

"In the five years from 1930 to 1935, the tuberculosis death rate dropped from 60 deaths to 40 deaths per 100,000 population," says Dr. H. Allen Moyer, State Health Commissioner. "The rate is below 40 now. It can be pushed still lower, however, by more concentrated work in finding and treating cases of tuberculosis. In order to make further reductions, cases must be found even before the individual knows of his tuberculosis infection. Finding such early cases is possible with chest X-ray of persons who have been in contact with anyone ill with tuberculosis."

Deaths from tuberculosis in the state totaled 1,881 in 1939, showing a rate of 36.9 deaths per 100,000 population. This was only a slight change from 1938 figures of 1,886 deaths and a rate of 36.6. Detroit had 945 of the 1,881 deaths last year.

Governor Dickinson And Van Wagoner To Visit Mackinac

Mackinac Island — Governor Luren D. Dickinson, Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner, United States Senator Prentiss M. Brown, and Congressman Fred Bradley of Rogers City were the first to definitely accept invitations of the Mackinac Island State Park Commission to be present at Fort Mackinac on Aug. 3 to participate in memorial exercises, honoring the late Frank D. Fitzgerald, Governor of Michigan who died in 1939 three months after commencing his second term in office.

Although the occasion will be brief and dignified, it is apparent from hotel reservations, reported to the Park Commission, that hundreds of friends of the former governor, both Democrats and Republicans, will come here when Governor Dickinson unveils the bronze tablet that will mark the spot to be known in future years as "Fitzgerald Memorial Gardens."

Congressman Bradley will preside over the ceremonies and will introduce Governor Dickinson, the only speaker. Music will be furnished by the Grand Hotel orchestra. The Reverend Father Joseph Ling of Mackinac Island will pronounce the invocation.

At high noon the official flag of the Governor of Michigan will be raised to half mast directly below the American flag, buglers will sound "taps for Fitz," the Fort Mackinac cannon will fire a nineteen gun salute for the past and present governors and the monument to Frank Fitzgerald will have taken its place among other historic shrines of the north country. A bronze plaque, mounted on granite will be unveiled.

"No man who ever served as governor of Michigan thought more of Mackinac Island and the north than did Frank Fitzgerald. He spent many happy days here on summer vacations. It is only fitting that his memory and love of the north be appropriately made a part of Fort Mackinac," Commissioner W. F. Doyle said.

Think, Talk, Act AMERICAN!

This is the part of the world where civilization still exists; where freedom is still man's prized possession; where children live at home in happiness; where we can all think, talk, and act as we please. So let's think, talk, and act American; let's preserve the blessings which are ours; let's make it clear that in this country there is room for only one "ism" . . . and that is AMERICANISM!
